NAZIS TO HANG FOR WAR ATROCITIES

BARE JAP PLAN TO CRUSH FLEET IF ATTACK FAILED

DECISIVE SEA FIGHT MAPPED, PROBERS HEAR

Admiral Reveals Foe's Long-Planned Scheme for Pearl Harbor Assault.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—Japanese naval leaders planned to seek an immediate, decisive sea battle with the American fleet in the raid on Pearl Harbor, a congressional investigators were told today.

Rear Admiral T. B. Inglis presented to the senate-house Pearl Harbor inquiry committee a Navy report on the Japanese plans which said Tokyo's war lords conceived the Dec. 7, 1941 attack in the first part of January, 1941, planned for it in the summer, and ordered it into effect Dec. 2.

In testimony yesterday, Inglis had said the United States Pacific fleet was numerically inferior to the Japanese in December, 1941, thus it might have faced defeat had the Japanese brought it to battle.

Source of Report

The report was based on translations of captured documents, questioning of prisoners of war, and questionnaires which Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur submitted to former members of the Japanese naval high command after the occupation.

"Study of the Japanese plan of operation," the report said, "indicates the Japanese high command made the following assumptions with regard to the United States fleet:

(A) That the main body of the U. S. Pacific fleet would be at anchor within Pearl Harbor on 7 December 1941, Sunday, Hawaii time.

(B) That a carrier force could be moved from home waters across the Pacific to within striking distance of the main islands of the Hawaiian group without undue risk of detection by American defensive reconnaissance.

"(C) That should assumptions (A) or (B) be in error, a reserve group of heavy naval units could sortie from the inland sea to give support to the carrier striking force in a decisive engagement with the American fleet. The other task forces of the Japanese fleet (southern force northern force, and the [illegible] seas force) would be available for this purpose.

(D) A powerful carrier air strike directed against the American forces based in Hawaii could, if tactical surprise were effected, achieve the strategic result of stopping the American fleet; that such a strike could achieve also the destruction of American land-based air power and thus permit the Japanese striking force to withdraw without damage."

No Landing Planned

The report said the Japanese had no plans to follow up the Pearl Harbor attack with landings in Hawaii because a troop transport train would have increased the possibility of detection of the striking force and because the supply problem that landings would have presented.

Expressing belief the complete plan was not known throughout the high rank of the Japanese government the report said:

"[illegible] reported that the [illegible] knew in advance only the general outline of the plan [illegible] that none of the Japanese officials who were in the United States, including Ambassadors Nomura and Kurusu, knew anything about the plan in advance."

The Navy study said the Japanese fleet left Hitokappu bay in the Kurile islands of Japan on Nov. 26 and [illegible]

ADMIRAL NIMITZ
Sees Too Many Disadvantages

PARLEY BACKS CONCILIATION

Labor and Management Make First Big Step at Truman Conference.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—The labor-management conference made its first step toward industrial peace today with the filing of a report indorsing conciliation and voluntary arbitration when employers and workers disagree.

In negotiating initial agreements between a union and a company, a conference committee agreed, no strike or lockout should be called until all peaceful bargaining measures have been exhausted.

The report is subject to approval by the executive committee and the full conference.

On the issue of a national wage increase policy, the conference was worse snarled than before.

The three resolutions are before the executive committee, all indorsing collective bargaining, but in three shades of opinion.

Management offered a proposal which would rule out any conference deliberation on national wage levels. John L. Lewis put in another supporting free bargaining without regard to the president's policy of raising wages generally without raising prices.

And Philip Murray, CIO president, declared he would fight for his resolution asking immediate collective bargaining everywhere "within the framework" of the President's declaration that wage increases are needed.

A management official predicted there would "be a job for everyone who wants to work" if the conference succeeds in minimizing labor strike and government curbs on business are lifted.

Ira Mosher, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, in a radio interview last night suggested an impartial fact-finding board be set up to investigate work stoppages which would affect the public health, safety or welfare. "Given the facts," he said, "the people would decide the issue quickly and fairly."

JAP NAVY BLAMED IN ATROCITY TRIAL

By The Associated Press

MANILA, Nov. 17—Attempts to link Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita with atrocities in Manila during the latter stages of the American campaign received a setback today when a Japanese army commander asserted naval forces waged most of the battle in the capital streets.

The prosecution called the witness, Lt. Gen. Shizuwo Yokoyama, after informing the commission trying Yamashita on war criminal charges that it wished to establish links of command between Yamashita as overall commander and Yokoyama as leader of the Manila defenses.

Yokoyama testified however, that naval forces defended the city.

During the day Yamashita heard a Filipino witness attribute to him a blunt order to "kill all prisoners of war."

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., Nov. 17 — Jewel thieves smashed the windows of two stores here before daylight today and escaped with silverware, rings, watches and other valuables.

Nimitz Rips Merger Plan, Urges Tie with Diplomats

Pacific Admiral Tells Senate "Theoretical Advantages" Outweighed by Serious Flaws.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz asserted today the "theoretical advantages" of merging the armed forces "are unattainable, whereas the disadvantages are so serious that it is not acceptable."

Events which led to the Pearl Harbor disaster, the Pacific fleet commander told the senate military committee, "have shown clearly enough that not only between the war and navy departments but between both of them and the state department there should have been more coordination of thinking and action."

Nimitz said he favors not a single department of defense but a national security council, composed of the secretaries of state, war and navy, as proposed by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal.

Acknowledging this stand against merger reverses his opinion of a year ago, he said:

"This change of opinion * * * represents my conviction based on additonal experience and further study of the proposal and its current implications."

Need Good Reasons

After reviewing the successful prosecution of the war in the Pacific, Nimitz said:

"I believe we should have very good reasons—better reasons than any offered so far—before we change a system that has proved itself so effective."

In the Pacific victory, Nimitz declared, "I believe there is credit enough for all. In particular I wish at all times to give full credit to air power."

He remarked, however, that the Navy provided and protected the ships which supplied the bomber bases "and would be required to protect such shipping in the future."

"Unity of command, and swiftness of decision are more necessary in the direct conduct of operations than in the planning at the top. At that level, where almost every decision must take into account a wide range of factors including those of national policy, deliberation is perhaps as important, if not more important, than speed.

"I do not now believe that the alternative of one-man decisions would work as well in the long run.

Triplication Possible

"Should the strategic air force be set up as a separate entity, the duplication in services and facilities which is frequently advanced as a reason for merging the Army and Navy, would become a possibility of triplication."

"In a single department of national defense * * * either the Navy will retain all the autonomy, integrity and prestige necessary to carry out its functions, in which case it might as well remain a separate department, or "It will lose thsee advantages * * * and become a secondary service."

WOMAN BORN HERE 94 YEARS AGO DIES

Mrs. Rohame Meily DeProsse from Pioneer Family.

Mrs. Rohame Meily DeProsse, 94, died in the home of a great niece, Mrs. Edwin P. King of 192 Barnhart street, at 2:50 p. m. yesterday following an illness of a week.

Born June 16, 1851, in Marion, she was a daughter of William and Lydia Beicher Meily, natives of Lebanon, Pa. The house in which she was born stood on Main street approximately at the place where the Thrift market is now located. She was married in Columbus to Prof. Angelo DeProsse, instructor in music at Ohio Wesleyan university, Delaware, and lived 45 years in Norwich, Conn., before coming back to Marion 15 years ago. Her husband preceded her in death a number of years ago. Until a year ago she lived here with a niece, Mrs. Grace Hoberman, who preceded her in death last year. She was a member of the Congregational church at Norwich.

Surviving are a nephew, Charles Meily of Peoria, Ill., 32 great nephews and nieces including Mrs. King in whose home she died, 32 great great nephews and nieces and 16 great-great-great nephews and nieces. She was the youngest and last of a family of 13 children.

Funeral services will be conducted Monday at 2 p. m. in the Merle H. Hughes mortuary on Mt. Vernon avenue by Rev. I. V. Bauguess, pastor of Forest Lawn Presbyterian church. Burial will be in Marion cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home after 7 tonight.

WEATHER MARS SPORT AFIELD

Hunters Find Pheasants Are Scarce; One Man Killed, 6 Wounded in Ohio.

Rain and mud marred the first full day of the hunting season as hunters returned to the field today. The predicted scarcity of pheasants was confirmed by those who went out on the opening day yesterday. They reported the number of rabbits as normal.

Weather cut the number who went out today but local hotels and restaurants were crowded with hunters.

At noon today no hunting accidents had been reported from Marion county but the state-wide casuality list read one dead and six wounded, three seriously.

Charles F. Warden, 36, of Columbus, a discharged veteran, was killed near Ashville and G. D. Eichenberger, 30, of Columbus was wounded in the wrist in Union county when a gun carried by a companion was accidentally discharged.

Gets Two Birds with One Shot

It's possible to kill two birds with one stone, at least on the opening hunting season day, according to a report given by William Markin of 465 Thompson street.

After hunting for nearly three hours north of town, yesterday afternoon at 2 p. m. Mr. Markin saw two pheasants flying in an approximately straight line and aimed at the one he was certain was a cock bird. Two birds, both cocks, fell. Two other hunters were in the field but neither had shot, they stated.

One Hunter Killed, Six Others Wounded

By The Associated Press

Ohio's hunting season today found one sportsman dead and six others wounded, three seriously, in shooting accidents.

Charles F. Warden, of Columbus, 36, discharged veteran, was killed yesterday near Ashville by the accidental discharge of a companion's gun.

Another Columbus air corps veteran, a 16-year-old Columbus youth and a 15-year-old Hamilton county boy were shot accidentally and three Toledo district hunters suffered wounds from shotgun discharges on the season's opening day.

Columbus Man Wounded in Union County

MARYSVILLE, Nov. 17 — C. D. Eichenberger, 30, of Columbus, was the first hunting victim reported in Union county Friday on the opening of the hunting season. Eichenberger was hunting with a companion on what is known as the Stamates farm north of Summerville. The companion's shotgun accidentally went off and pellets penetrated Eichenberger's left wrist. He was given emergency treatment at the office of Dr. E. J. Marsh at Broadway.

WON'T INDICT KRUPP

By The Associated Press

NUERNBERG, GERMANY, Nov. 17—The international military tribunal refused today to indict Alfried Krupp, proposed by U. S. Prosecutor Jackson as a substitute for Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, and ordered the trial of other Nazis to start as schedule Nov. 20.

TRUCK STRIKE IS CALLED OFF AFTER PARLEY

Stoppage by 20,000 Drivers in Midwest Area Averted at Meeting.

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

A threatened strike of an estimated 20,000 over the road truck drivers in four midwestern states was averted today after a series of management-labor-government conferences in Washington, Detroit and Chicago.

* * *

By The Associated Press

A complete tieup of over-the-road trucking in eight midwest states by a strike of an estimated 20,000 AFL drivers was reported today by an operators' spokesman in Kansas City.

Fred C. Wheelock, chairman of the employer negotiating committee in Kansas City, said operators had been unsuccessful to meet with union officials to negotiate a new contract.

Reports that an agreement had been effected at a Chicago meeting to end the walkout, which started at midnight Thursday, as well as a threatened strike of additional thousands of drivers in four other states, were not immediately confirmed.

Wheelock estimated 20,000 drivers were off the jobs in the eight states—Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa and the northwest half of Wisconsin. The reported negotiations underway involve AFL drivers in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Michigan.

The walkout of drivers boosted the nation's idle because of labor disputes to close to the 300,000 mark.

Thousands of bus riders in Tulsa, Okla., and on Staten Island, N. Y., were deprived of service by strikes of AFL drivers in wage disputes.

In Minneapolis the strike of Northland Greyhound bus drivers in Minnesota was ended for at least 20 days as Governor Thye certified the case to a fact-finding commission under a state labor law.

An AFL spokesman in Pittsburgh said there appeared little hope of immediate settlement of the strike of some 4,000 drivers for six Greyhound lines which has halted east-west operations east of the Mississippi in 19 states for 17 day. A wage issue is involved.

In Chicago the NLRB reported employes in 10 plants of the International Harvester Co. voted in favor of a work stoppage in support of the CIO United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers union demands for a 30 per cent wage increase. Plants involved are at Richmond, Ind., Auburn, N. Y.; Rock Island, Ill., East Moline, Ill., Bettendorf, Ia., and five Chicago plants.

SEVEN IN RACE FOR CONSERVATION POSTS

Five To Be Chosen in County Next Tuesday.

Seven men have filed petitions as candidates for supervisor of the Marion county soil conservation district, Arthur H. Smith, county extension agent announced today. Five are to be elected and the voting will take place in the centralized schools of the county which will be open from 7:30 to 10 p. m. Tuesday, Nov. 20.

The candidates filing petitions each signed by 25 landowners are: Calvin W. Baldinger, of near Caledonia; Raymond A. Behner, of near New Bloomington; Harve H. Berringer, of near Waldo; Orville E. Griswold, of near Morral; Clyde W. Hinamon, of near Marion; Homer Kile, of near Caledonia and Victor H. Kreis, of near Marion. No more petitions are being accepted.

The five chosen will supervise the work of any service obtained through the board, conduct surveys, investigations and research related to the need for the conservation, soil building or necessary protective measures. The board will develop plans to conserve water and soil resources, the building of soil fertility and erosion prevention.

BELSEN BEAST, OTHERS TO DIE, COURT ORDERS

30 Sentenced in Horrors at Prison Camps; Irma Grese Doomed.

By The Associated Press

LUENEBURG, Germany, Nov. 17—Josef Kramer and other leading defendants in the Lueneburg war crimes trial were condemned today to death by hanging for atrocities committed at Oswiecim and Belsen concentration camps.

The British military court convicted Kramer, the ex-commandant known as the "Beast of Belsen," and 29 of his aides and guards at the end of the nine-week trial yesterday. Fourteen others were acquitted.

Irma Grese, blonde, 22-year-old queen of the Belsen gang, and Dr. Fritz Klein, grey-haired physician who chose victims for the Oswiecim gas chamber, were among those condemned to die.

Others to be hanged were:

Peter Winegartner, 32, former member of the Yugoslav army.

Franz Hoeszler, 34, an S. S. guard since 1934.

Karl Francoih, 33, S. S. guard and former Silesian coal miner.

Anagar Pichen, 32, S. S. guard of Danish extraction.

Franz Strafle, 33, S. S. guard and former Berlin dairyman.

Wilhelm Dorr, 24, S. S. guard and a farmer's son.

Juana Borman, 42, who gave up mission society work to join the S. S.

Elizabeth Volkenrath, chief of S. S. women.

The father of small, sour-faced Ilsa Forster, SS cookhouse supervisor and convicted war criminal, [illegible] his daughter "could do such things," he said in a letter read to the court today.

The letter was read during pleas for mitigation of sentences on 30 members of the Belsen gang late today.

Ilsa broke into tears when her father protested that her family was ardently anti-Nazi and that Ilsa "was forced to join the SS in August, 1944."

The girl was convicted of beating a young Jewish girl to death in the Belsen cookhouse.

A total of 11 were sentenced to hang.

One of the 19 additional defendants convicted was sentenced to life imprisonment. The remainder drew terms ranging from one to 15 years.

Kramer, married and the father of three children, received without emotion the sentence which grew out of his career as Oswiecim overseer and "The Beast of Belsen."

Hundreds of German civilians flanked the roadway to the Lueneburg courthouse as the prisoners were moved from jail to the court under armored escort.

German civilians expressed surprise the death penalty was imposed upon only 11. They had expressed belief that all of the convicted would be executed.

Says Nazi Could Whip Like Smithy

By The Associated Press

DACHAU, GERMANY, Nov. 17—A U. S military court was told today that Friedrich Ruppert, former commander of the Dachau concentration camp, "could beat people without changing expression—just like a blacksmith hammering iron."

The witness was Rudolf Wolf, a young German engraver who spent nearly three years in the prison.

School Pupils' Bond Sale To Aid Purple Heart Vets

Marion To Be Represented in Nationwide Campaign To Equip Hospital Units; Starts Nov. 26.

High school and elementary grade pupils in the Marion public schools will turn bond salesmen beginning Monday, Nov. 26, in a campaign to raise $60,000 to finance hospital units to speed the recovery of Purple Heart heroes now returning from the war sectors at the rate of 11,000 each week. The drive will be conducted in connection with the Victory Loan campaign now in progress.

Financing of 35,000 hospital units at $3,000 a unit before the Christmas vacation is the goal of the schools throughout America, and the goal of the Marion public schools is $60,000. While each school's quota is at least one room, Harding has set a goal of five rooms and Vernon plans to try to equip two. Edison and Central Junior High schools and the elementary buildings will campaign for financing of one each, making a total of 20 complete units. This includes X-ray machines, operating tables, surgical instruments, beds, wheel chairs and other equipment.

Name To Be on Panel

Any school selling bonds enough to finance equipping of a room will have its name placed upon the sponsorship panel on the bed and a duplicate panel will be forwarded to the school. Wounded service men occupying the beds will be encouraged to write to the sponsoring schools.

The schools of the country have been given a favored spot in the Victory Loan campaigns now in progress, the sponsors point out. The pupils will conduct the only house-to-house canvass that will be made and a publicity campaign will urge Marion citizens to purchase bonds through the schools either through the two-day "sell bonds in school" campaign set for Wednesday Nov. 28 and Thursday, Nov. 29, or the organized house-to-house canvass on Nov. 30, Dec. 3 and 4. The Marion County War Bond Committee is expecting the school campaign to account for a major share of the "E" bond sales, they announce

Preliminary Work

Monday, Nov. 26, will find the pupils setting the stage for the campaign with announcements and other publicity. Following the two-day sale in the schools the house-to-house canvass will get under way on Friday, Nov. 30, with pupils of the sixth grades taking the initiative in the solicitations. Pupils in the junior high schools will conduct a follow up campaign on Tuesday, Dec. 4 to close the sales. While elementary schools will not complete the sales they will receive the credit for the sales, those in charge of the campaign state.

The quota for schools for this last Victory Loan is set up on an individual school basis rather than as a blanket quota for the system, and at a meeting of the school war bond committee recently when plans were made for the campaign, it was decided that one hospital unit for each school should be the minimum. While $3,000 is higher than most schools have reached in previous campaigns, it was pointed out that this time many more bonds will be sold to parents and neighbors through the schools since this is the last opportunity for this type of investment.

Below Quota Provisions

Schools not reaching their quota may purchase items of equipment listed in the "Schools for Peace" publication. However, it is pointed out, sponsorship credit will be given only for the financing of a complete hospital unit.

Supt. E. E. Holt has arranged for having the envelopes collected each morning and afternoon of the drive. Plans for the school campaign were outlined at a meeting of the school war bond committee composed of Cecil Gabler, chairman, Miss Patsy Rauhauser and Miss Philomen Gregg.

County's Score in Victory Loan

County quota	$2,223,000.00
Sales to date	1,396,913.25
E Bond quota	582,650.00
E Bond sales	173,756.25

* * *

Bond sales in Marion county in the current victory bond campaign reached $1,396,913.25 today with the report of yesterday's sales amounting to $18,287.50.

Purchases were made in only two series. E bond sales amounted to $8,287.50 and treasury 2½ series sales amounted to $10,000.

E bond sales to date are approximately one-third of the county's quota.

To reach yesterday's total 129 sales were made. The total number of bonds sold to date is 3,313.

Ponies Wanted In Parade for Santa

Boys and girls of Marion, those who own ponies at least, are letting Santa Claus down. And only 44 days before he will traditionally do his best by the boys and girls.

The committee on arrangements for the Christmas parade Friday honoring Santa Claus is especially anxious to find boys and girls who own ponies to ride in the parade.

Louis E. Michel, secretary of the Marion Chamber of Commerce, reports that to date no inquiries have been received at his office.

Since the parade is in honor of Santa, Mr. Michel points out that this would be an excellent opportunity for such boys and girls to make an impression on the old gentleman. Those who are interested should contact the office of the chamber of commerce.

COME AROUND NEXT WAR, FORGETFUL HESS URGES

By The Associated Press

NUERNBERG, Nov. 17—Two of Rudolf Hess' former secretaries, Misses Fahr and Speer, were ushered into his presence unexpectedly yesterday, but if the meeting was a trap to shake his amnesia story it fell flat.

Hess sat in the center of an interrogating room in the palace of justice, handcuffed to guards.

"Hello," said the first visitor, Miss Fahr.

"Hello," said Hess.

"I used to work for you," Miss Fahr said.

"Good," Hess replied.

Hess seemed mildly surprised and once or twice he glanced questioningly about the room, filled with observers.

The door opened once more and Miss Speer came in.

"Did you used to work for me too?" Hess inquired.

"Yes, I did."

"Good," Hess said, "I'll give both of you jobs the next time I become a high official of the Third Reich."

Harding Ends Grid Season, Bows To Springfield, 12-0

Minor Fracas Draws Fans on Field as Game Ends; Prexies Hold in Last Half.

By BILL COULTER

About 2,000 pigskin followers were on hand at the Harding Stadium last night as the Presidents rang down the curtain on the 1945 grid campaign by suffering a 12-0 loss at the hands of the Springfield Wildcats. The Prexies after getting off to a bad start, showed considerably more power in the final half.

Although they did threaten to score in the final period, Harding lacked the punch to carry them across. Not only did the Prexy offense improve during the second half but their defense as well held the Wildcats to but a total of 32 yards in the last two quarters.

Springfield did their scoring in the first half as Dick Snyder tallied the first six-pointer in the opening frame when he jaunted 11 yards into the Harding end zone. Leonard Harshaw scored the final touchdown when he skirted end for a 47 yard sprint. Both of Don Wright's placekicks in attempt for conversion failed. The game ended in a little misunderstanding as Dave Lee and a few of the Wildcats reached the kindling point but the spark was quenched before it developed into a brawl.

Harding Gets Nowhere

The Wildcats kicked off to Harding over the end zone, the Prexies receiving the ball on their own 20 on an automatic touchback. Harding was unable to pick up a first down and Taylor booted to the Springfield 48. Harshaw returned to the Harding 48. Two plays later found the ball on the Harding 37 for a Springfield first down. Jim Powers crashed to the Prexy 24 for another. The Wildcats were given a holding penalty on the next play placing the ball on the Harding 39. Powers cut around end on the next play and got to the Prexy 20 before Bill England pounced on him.

On the next two plays, Harshaw and Powers brought the ball to the Harding 11 and on the Wildcats' next attempt, Snyder took the ball from quarterback Tom Ferree and slipped around his right end to score the first Springfield touchdown.

Still No First Down

Weber brought the kickoff to the Harding 28 yard line. Gene Andrews picked up three yards for the Prexies but they could not advance it any farther and Taylor punted to the Springfield 41. On the next play, Dave Lee tore through to nip Harshaw for a two yard loss. However, the Wildcats drove on for a first down. At this point the Harding line started to tighten and Springfield took to the air. This did not last long as Ralph Weber intercepted a Wildcat pass and ran it to the Prexy 46. Jim Coss brought the ball to Midfield as the first quarter came to a halt with Springfield leading 6-0.

Harding started the second period off right when Weber completed a pass to Taylor on the Springfield 41. Harding then ran up against a brick wall and Taylor again booted. However, the Wildcats were charged with unnecessary roughness on the play.

Statistics

Harding was thus given another chance but fumbled with Springfield recovering on their own 19. On two successive plays, Powers and Harshaw advanced the ball to the Harding 47 with Lee, Gene Frederick and Don Zeisler getting in on the tackles.

Scores from 47

Harshaw then cut for the sideline and dashed straight down it for the second and final Springfield score.

The teams traded the ball and Harding got a break late in the secnd period when Springfield fumbled with Earl Stroble and Bill England recovering on their own 47. Again the Prexies found the going tough and Taylor punted just at the end of the first half with the Wildcats from Springfield out in front 12-0.

The Harding band gave another one of its spectacular performances at halftime. It was parents' night last night and the band formed the words Mom and Dad. The parents of the boys on the Harding squad were introduced over the public address system.

Show Improvement

Harding looked like a different team during the second half. The Prexies got another break in the third quarter when Springfield fumbled on their own 47 with Larry Russell recovering for Harding. Jerry Richie plowed through tackle for five yards, and Dick Taylor completed a pass to Holliday on the Wildcat 40. Harding was forced to give up possession of the ball for the time being but took over again late in the third stanza when Springfield was forced to punt. Harding went to the Springfield 22 but again lost possession of the pigskin. Snyder broke through and ran all the way to the Harding 40 where he fumbled with Harding recovering, just at the end of the third period.

The Prexies promptly made a first down bringing the ball up to midfield. Weber toted the ball to the Wildcat 39 for another Harding first down and Russell went for nine yards. Richie skirted his right end and went all the way to the Springfield 23. However, Harding stopped there as they were penalized five yards and lost two more.

Miss Scoring Chance

Harding had a grand opportunity to score when Russell recovered another Wildcat fumble on the Springfield 16 In a couple of plays Taylor went to the Springfield eight and Richie drove to the seven. At this point the Springfield line held. Time was drawing to a close but the Presidents still were determined. Russell intercepted a pass for Harding and ran it to the 50 yard line. Dick Taylor made four yards and then the Prexies started passing. Completed passes to Holliday and England brought the ball to the Springfield 35. However the Prexies relinquished the ball for the last time. Springfield had time for just two scrimmage plays and on the last play of the game, the Springfield ball carrier and Dave Lee appeared to be rather peeved at each other after Lee had brought him to earth.

The officials were right on hand to separate the two lads as the fans and team members poured onto the field to get a look at what was happening.

Seniors Finish Up

Dave Lee, Paul Daum, Dick Holliday, Ralph Weber and Dick Taylor, all seniors, played their final game in a Harding uniform. All five turned in a nice job at their respective positions.

The lineups:

Harding	Pos.	Springfield
Holliday	LE	Wright
Zeisler	LT	Sanders
Nolfi	LG	Fox
Lee	C	Downey
Cline	RG	Wysong
Daum	RT	Trimmer

'Billy' Southworth Honored at Kenton Banquet

Special to The Star

KENTON, Nov. 17 — Top-flight immortals in baseball's Hall of Fame joined with members and friends of the Kenton lodge of Elks Thursday night in the fourth annual banquet honoring one of their number who has attained distinction in the baseball realm—"Billy" Southworth, newly-signed manager of the Boston Braves and former manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Southworth, life member of the Kenton lodge of Elks, highlighted the evening with his address in which he told of the manner in which he was called to the managership of the Braves.

Praises Breadon

He paid marked tribute to Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, for releasing him from his 1946 contract with the Cards, permitting him to take advantage of the lucrative offer made by Boston.

"I have never witnessed such an expression of friendship and unselfishness as was exhibited by Sam Breadon in this case," said Billy. "And I would like to say that this was characteristic of the entire relationship between us during the six years I have been with the Cardinals. Never has there been a harsh word between us in all this time. I am proud of the friendship we hold."

Southworth gave a pre-view of the material he has to begin with at Boston, and was optimistic about the outlook.

At the conclusion of Southworth's address, Frank Schindewolf, toastmaster, presented to Billy, on behalf of the Kenton Elks, a beautiful Gold Star, diamond-center necktie pin, symbolic of the death, in the nation's service, of Southworth's son, the late Major Billy Southworth Jr.

Other Guests Present

Among the baseball figures of yesteryear present were the following:

Ad Thatcher of Toledo, famous as the promoter of the Willard-Dempsey world heavyweight championship fight.

Jess Haines of Columbus, one of the great pitchers of his time, former member of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Hank Gowdy, former Boston Braves catcher at the time the Braves won four straight games from the Philadelphia Athletics to cop the 1914 World Series.

Cy Young, top-flight pitcher at the turn of the century who won more than 500 major league games. He is now 79 years old.

Bob Ewing of Wapakoneta, former Cincinnati Reds pitcher. Mr. and Mrs Ewing were presented with a beautiful wedding cake, yesterday being the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary.

There were some 50 uniformed and discharged veterans introduced among the 450 guests at the banquet.

Is This Army's Secret for Grid Success?

By The Associated Press

Mashed potatoes and milk have made many a boy healthy—and they are a must on the dinner table at the U. S. Military Academy. Probably one of the greatest lovers of the popular white substances is All-America Glenn Davis. His pal, center Jim Enos of Army's great football team, isn't very far behind him. Just take a look at their plates, and what they're reaching for in the Cadet mess hall, and you'll know the whole story.

CALEDONIA'S SPURT TOPS IBERIA 34-31

12-Point Spree in Last Frame Gives Victory.

After trailing Iberia for three quarters Caledonia came out strong in the final session and won an uphill battle from Iberia last night at Caledonia 34 to 31. The visitors jumped into a 14 to 8 lead in the first stanza and held on to a 19 to 16 advantage at half time. With a nearly even third period in which Iberia tallied seven points to Caledonia's six things looked bad for Coach Salisbury's quintet but a big spurt in the final stanza with 12 points to the visitors' five pulled the game out of the fire for Caledonia's opening victory.

Caledonia reserves won the preliminary contest 30 to 9.

REDS' BOSS DECLARES SEVENTH NOT SO BAD

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Nov. 17 — The Cincinnati Reds finished in seventh place last season but Warren C. Giles, the Reds' general manager, says the next to the last spot has its advantages.

Giles pointed out yesterday that big league managers will have a serious problem in choosing between the stars who are coming out of the armed forces after an absence of several years and the boys who have been standouts during wartime baseball's inferior quality play.

"Our problem is not so great as in other clubs," Giles declared. "We finished seventh and we didn't have many standout players last year despite wartime competition."

However, the Redleg centerfielder post may present a problem. Mike McCormick, who did a good job in that garden before the war, will be back to battle it out with Dan Clay who developed into a good player last year.

Small Fry Ohio Teams in Title Tilt Tonight

By The Associated Press

SALEM, O., Nov. 17—A post-season game between the undefeated Leetonia and Copley football teams here tonight is taking on the aspects of a little "Rose Bowl" affair.

Every establishment in Leetonia is due to close up—except the village police station—as the little town comes to see two of the state's top - ranking smaller schools battle for a mythical Ohio Class B title.

Copley scored 411 to its opponents' 28 points and Leetonia tallied 300 to 65.

Although Bolivia is primarily agricultural, its economy is almost entirely dependent on the production of minerals.

CLARIDON OUTPOINTS MARENGO FIVE, 36-27

Marion County Squad Piles Up Early Lead.

Claridon opened the basketball season last night at Marengo with a 36 to 27 win over the Morrow county quintet. A lead piled up in the first half pulled Coach Augenstein's lads to victory. Grabbing a first quarter advantage 10 to 6 and increasing it to 26 to 11 at the intermission, they coasted the rest of the way. Marengo came back in the third quarter and outscored the winners 11 to 5. Each team tallied five points in the final period.

Hardin, Marengo center, led the offensive parade with 12. Jim Ruth led Claridon point makers with 11 points.

The Claridon reserves came out 19 to 17 winners in a close preliminary game.

FREY GETS DISCHARGE

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Nov. 16—Lonnie Frey, sure-footed second baseman for Cincinnati's Reds from 1938 until he was inducted prior to the 1944 season, has been released from the Army at Fort Riley, Kas., Redleg officials announced today. The 32-year old second sacker's return to civilian status is expected to reunite the keystone combination of Frey and Eddie Miller which in 1943 fell one double-play short of tying the all time major league record of 193 in a single season.

RAMS TO HONOR STAR

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17—Riley Matheson, all-league guard with the Cleveland Rams of the National Football league, will be honored during the Rams' next home game with the Boston Yanks Dec. 2. Local fans plan to present an appropriate gift.

LA RUE CAGERS NOSE RIDGEWAY 35 TO 34

Free Toss in Last Minute Spells Victory.

A free throw by John Dickason in the last minute untied the score and gave LaRue a victory in the opening game of the season over Ridgeway, 35 to 34. Kenny Jones had knotted the count with a charity toss only a half minute before.

The game became very rough in the closing moments as both teams battled for the sphere. LaRue grabbed the lead in the first quarter 14 to 12 and increased it to 26 to 20 at the halfway mark. In the third session Ridgeway came back strong and took a one-point lead 32 to 31 but the winners tallied a field goal and two foul shots in the final period to a lone fielder by the Hardin county lads.

K. Jones of LaRue led point makers with 13 as he dunked in six field goals and a free throw. Whetzel led the losers' offense with four fielders and three charity tossers. The game was played at Ridgeway. LaRue reserves won 21-9.

BAUGH AND LUCKMAN TO TANGLE SUNDAY

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—With Sammy Baugh and Sid Luckman tied for the forward passing lead, the air should be full of footballs at Washington tomorrow in the only 1945 meeting of the Redskins and the lowly Chicago Bears.

Philadelphia will be favored to add the scalps of the Pittsburgh Steelers to their string despite the return of Bill Dudley to the Pitt lineup.

Cleveland and Detroit, deadlocked for first in the western division, play on the road, respectively at the Chicago Cardinals and New York Giants. The Rams, pressing on toward new league records with an average gain of 5.1 yards every time they run the ball from their formation, figure to have a "breather" with the Cards who have won only once in eight starts.

Green Bay's defending champion Packers, needing to sweep their last three games to keep alive a flickering mathematical hope, play at Boston where the Yanks likewise are struggling to avoid elimination.

Carey's Blue Devils To Get Turkey Dinner

Special to The Star

CAREY, Nov. 17—Carey's Blue Devils, beaten only by Upper Sandusky's perfect-season gridders, will be honored Monday night at a turkey dinner arranged by the High school Athletic association.

The 1945 edition was the best in Carey history piling up 218 points to 25 for opponents, winning eight games in a row, five without being scored on.

Outweighed by every team it played, the squad averaged only 150 pounds. Coach Doc Reister is already looking forward to a bright season next year. He loses only six seniors.

Snatches of Sports

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—Among the ambitious projects being lined up by the Scholastic Sports Institute are surveys of injuries among high school athletes and of eligibility rules...It's a safe prediction that headman Herb McCracken and his staff will find injuries are most frequent where the coaching and medical supervision is weak and that the eligibility survey will produce one grand headache.. Baseball's high school committee can't find any two states where the rules are the same.

ACTION DELAYED ON HIGH SCHOOL SET UP

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 17—The question of how to divide Ohio high schools into three classes is in the "still pending" classification today after the board of control of the Ohio High School Athletic association deferred action on the proposal.

Harold W. Emswiler, OHSAA commissioner, said following a meeting last night, that the deferment would not affect the date that such a division would be effective since it could not go into effect before the next school year.

The board approved placing Bremen High school on probation until next Oct. 12 because of disorder at a Bremen-Philo football game in which Bremen officials withdrew their team from the field.

The group also adopted on a one-year trial basis, a uniform set of track rules proposed by Ohio track coaches.

CARDINGTON CAGERS EDGED BY PLEASANT

Marion Co. Quintet Wins 29-23 in Opener.

Coach Merton Porter's Pleasant Township basketball quintet opened the hardwood season last night with a 29 to 23 victory over Cardington on the Pleasant floor. The game was a battle all the way as the Morrow county lacs grabbed the lead in the first period 8 to 4 but the Townshippers led at intermission 15 to 11. They held a one point advantage at the three quarter station and outscored Cardington 8 to 4 in the last canto.

The game resembled football part of the time as both teams were battling hard for the leather numerous contacts occurred.

Mayers led the point parade for Pleasant with four fielders and a free throw. Smith led the Cardington offensive with 8 points garnered on three field goals and two free tosses.

The Pleasant Reserves triumphed 27 to 12.

HAWKINSON Tread Your Tires

Many users of HAWKINSON TREADS tell us that our treads actually improve their tires—that they experience INCREASED mileage on them. There are several very good reasons for this, two of them, reasons being that (a) no heat is applied to the cords and inner rubber during the process of application, and that (b) the tread is applied under natural running conditions that are not used even in making a new tire, causing HAWKINSON TREADS to run cooler.

No HAWKINSON TREAD will be applied until the tire has been given the most rigid inspection and the carcass found to be in first class condition.

Starred with Lauren Bacall; "The Dolly Sisters" Booked for 10 Days.

...ential Agent," starring ... Boyer and Lauren Bacall ... supporting cast of Katina ... Peter Lorre, Victor ... and George Coulouris, is ...ng shown through Mon... the Ohio theater.

... of this film takes place ... and concerns the ad... of a Spaniard, Denard, ... by Charles Boyer, an ex... now engaged in a secret ... on behalf of Spain's he... Republicans. He embarks on a trip to London in order to purchase large stores of coal from the British and here begins an incredible voyage.

Lauren Bacall portrays Rose Cullen, an impetuous daughter of an English lord, who at first is only mildly curious about the mystery surrounding Denard. Later she is willing to risk her fortune and her life itself for his safety.

"The Dolly Sisters," a technicolor picture starring Betty Grable, John Payne and June Haver, will be shown for 10 days starting Tuesday.

This picture is based on the story of the two top glamour girls of a generation ago whose lives and loves were the talk of the world. Betty Grable is seen in the role of Jenny Dolly with June Haver as her equally talented sister, Rosie. John Payne plays the role of a young song-and-dance man whose romantic link with Jenny constantly threatens to break up the sensational sister team. The story opens in 1904 with their arrival in New York from Hungary as children who dance for their supper in a little restaurant in Manhattan's East Side. It tells of their success in America as well as on the European continent.

'Wonder Man' with Danny Kaye Starred, Now on Palace Screen

Virginia Mayo Also in Featured Role in Technicolor Picture; Hedy Lamarr Movie Coming.

"Wonder Man," starring Danny Kaye and Virginia Mayo, will be shown Sunday through Wednesday at the Palace theater.

In this technicolor picture Danny Kaye plays the dual role of Buzzy Bellew and Edwin Dingle, identical twins who are greatly different in their temperament. Buzzy is a star night club entertainer who has several times failed to appear for a wedding to his dancing partner, Midge Muller. Edwin is a grown-up quiz kid who knows the answers to everything in the books, but very little about life.

Buzzy is murdered by two henchmen of Ten Grand Jacks, a notorious gangster, but his spirit comes back to haunt Edwin which forces him to impersonate Buzzy at the same time.

A sports picture, "My Man, Jasper," and the latest Paramount News will be shown with "Wonder Man."

"Her Highness and the Bellboy" starring Hedy Lamarr, Robert Walker, June Allyson and "Rags" Ragland will be shown Thursday through Saturday.

This is a story of a bellboy who accidentally meets and falls in love with a princess and through a series of highly humorous circumstances imagines she is in love with him too.

Short features to be shown with "Her Highness and the Bellboy" are "Animal Ology" and the news of the day.

"Chicago Kid" and Frontier Film on State Program

"Chicago Kid" starring Donald Barry and Lynne Roberts, and "Marshall of Gunsmoke" with Tex Ritter and Fuzzy Knight will be shown Sunday and Monday at the State theater.

"Maisie Goes to Reno" with Ann Sothern and John Hodiak, and "Moon Over Las Vegas" with Anne Gwynne and David Bruce will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Hitchhike to Happiness" starring Al Pearce and Dale Evans, and "Sheriff of Las Vegas" with Bill Elliott and Bobby Blake will be shown Thursday through Saturday.

WILL DECORATE CHURCH

GALION, Nov. 17 — For the first time since the war started, outside Christmas decorations will be placed at Peace Lutheran church. Decorations will be provided by the Luther league. This was decided at the monthly meeting of the league Thursday night in the parish house.

SPEAKS AT GALION

GALION, Nov. 17—Rev. William Alexander of Bradford was guest speaker Thursday night for the annual Father-Son banquet of the United Brethren church. A program was presented by George Rule of West Point and Robert Heimlich of Cardington. Lowell Flowers was toastmaster and Roy Shumaker presided.

UPPER WAC DISCHARGED

UPPER SANDUSKY, Nov. 17—Wac Corporal Clara B. Snyder has just received her honorable discharge from the Army having served three years, 18 months overseas. She was discharged from Ft. Dix. The first six months overseas she served in England, then was at headquarters in Paris.

GALION WOMEN MEET

GALION, Nov. 17—Philanthropic work was planned by the American Legion Auxiliary Thursday night. Mrs. Fred Tullis presided. The group voted to send money to five veterans' hospitals for Christmas, and toys for the toy shop at the Dayton veterans' hospital.

Marion Books Pan-Americana

Movie Goes South of Border for Entertaining Story.

"Pan Americana" starring Phillip Terry, Audrey Long and Robert Benchley, and "Lady For a Night" with John Wayne and Joan Blondell will be shown midnight Saturday through Monday at the Marion theater.

The former tells of four New York picture magazine representatives who make a flying trip through the Latin - American countries to pick the prettiest girls of each nation for an elaborate musical revue to be performed in Washington, Jo Anne, a member of the group, hopes to meet her fiance in Rio, where he is located, but in the meantime, troubles arise.

"Circumstantial Evidence" starring Michael O'Shea and Lloyd Nolan, and "Where Do We Go From Here" with Fred MacMurray, Joan Leslie and June Haver will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday.

The former tells the story of Joe Reynolds, a tough World War I hero, whose bitterness over the death of his wife is softened only by the presence of his young son, Pat, who is the apple of his eye. Joe tries to protect Pat when he gets in trouble and in this way is accused of murder and is taken to jail. The latter picture, in technicolor, tells of a frantic and frustrated 4-F man who would do most anything to get into the Army. When he stumbles across a well-meaning genie who promises to get him into the Army with his magic lamp, his troubles really begin.

"Son of Lassie" starring Peter Lawford, Donald Crisp with Lassie and Laddie, and "Wagons Westward" with Chester Morris, Anita Louise and Fuzzy Knight will be shown Thursday through Saturday.

"Son of Lassie" tells of Laddie, a foolish little pup who grows up to follow his daring young master into many dangers and passes the true test of courage when courage means life itself. The story is told from Yorkshire, Lassie's home, to an air mission over occupied Norway, where Laddie and Joe are forced to parachute into danger and they spend days battling the enemy both physically and in outwitting them.

2 BIG COMEDIES

"DANNY KAY IS THE WONDER MAN OF 1945" — Walter Winchell

"'Wonder Man' is wonderful. A merry, mad, melange of music and mirth, this Samuel Goldwyn production is a fantasy done in splendorous Technicolor, loaded with gals and gags, all wrapped up in as neat a package of film entertainment of the musical comedy type as ever came out of Hollywood." — Hollywood Reporter

Hits the jackpot for entertainment. A gem-studded production that crowns Danny Kay's regal comedy style . . . Praise! Praise Praise! For the rhyme and reason Kaye gives to this screwball comedy . . . For the Hartman - Khavelson - Rapp screenplay . . . For Bruce Humberstone's direction . . . and a bouquet to Samuel Goldwyn for his lavish production." — Film Daily

"It was an observation of ours that Kaye accomplished the almost impossible in his first feature, "Up in Arms," by leaping all the barbed wire into immediate stardom. "Wonder Man" proves an important something, in addition: His first bag of tricks had not emptied the bag. He is better this time, and certainly he was plenty good before." — Red Kann, M. P. Herald

——AND WE'RE SURE YOU'LL MAKE IT UNANIMOUS!

SELECTS NEAR 14-YEAR HIGH

General Trend Mixed on Street Today; Profit Cashing Heavy.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—Selected stocks continued to reach for 14-year highs in today's market although numerous leaders were unable to surmount week-end profit cashing on the lengthy swing.

While slowdowns appeared after a lively start, transfers of around 1,000,000 shares were among the largest for a short stretch since 1941. Trends were mixed near the close with fractional variations the rule.

Standard Gas $4 preferred, again spurred by reported plans to amend the company's reorganization plan, jumped several points in the first hour but eventually encountered resistance. International Telephone was a lively performer on the upside. Ahead most of the time were Republic Aviation, American Can, Western Union "A," Bethlehem, United Aircraft, American Water Works and Kennecott.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

"I THINK you are right about there being no further menace to Olina's happiness where Mary is concerned," I told Olga, thankful indeed that I had proof of my words to give her.

She shot a shrewd look at me. "You have something more to tell me," she said.

"Yes, I have," I told her. "When I took Georges down to our apartment to my father, he asked me for a minute's conversation alone with me. We left the elevator at the sixteenth floor, and there Georges, who ever since he left Olina had been acting like a man very much in love who has just bidden his sweetheart a long farewell, surprised me very much."

"Yes?" she breathed u[n]eas[i]ly, as I paused, and I saw how she was snatching at every slightest indication that Georges really loved her daughter.

Thrust One In

"He took from his pocket," I said slowly, "not only the theatrical photograph of herself which Mary had given him, but an old affectionately inscribed photograph of Mary, one of two which she had given him long ago in the days of their early betrothal."

"But—but," Olga stammered, "I thought Georges threw those photographs into a waste basket that time?"

"He did thrust one in," I said, and I knew that she was visualizing, as I saw the scene when Gus brought back the torn and twisted photograph, and Georges disclaimed any desire for it. "Mary knew, however, that he had torn, but no more believe that he had destroyed them both. I always have been sure, however, that he had kept the second one, and I was determined that he should not go abroad with it in his pocket."

Olga gave a little shudder.

"That would have been dynamite," she said. "Suppose something had happened to him, and that the inscribed photograph was found on him and returned here, with the chance of Noel's finding out about it!"

"There was no chance of the photograph's being found on his body," I said grimly and she looked up alertly.

Would Get Photograph

"You mean—" she began.

"I mean," I said with emphasis, "that I was fully determined to ask my father to have 'Mr. K.,' his very efficient FBI assistant, get hold of that photograph before Georges should be sent away."

"Oh, you clever, clever darling!" she exclaimed. "But this way is so much better! I suppose he did give them to you, after he had taken them from his pocket?"

"I didn't make that very clear, did I?" I asked ruefully. "Yes, he gave them to me, and asked that I return them to Mary. He did not add that he accepted her dictum that friendship was to be the only emotion either should feel for the other, but his every movement and expression of his face sent that message to her."

Olga's mouth quirked into a smile.

A Wonderful Actor

"How he must have been enjoying himself in that interview with you!" she commented. "I always have thought Georges would have made a wonderful actor if he had been trained for the stage. He does so love to dramatize himself."

"Yes, he does," I agreed. "And now, Olga, is there anything else you wish to ask of me?"

"No, my dear Madge," she returned. "You have set my fears at rest in a manner that I would not have thought possible ten minutes ago. And, now I must let you go. Thank you, and au revoir."

She turned and put her key into the lock.

But before I had taken more than a step away from her, the elevator, which never comes to the Lansfield owner's top floor suite unless it carries persons whom Philip Veritzen knows, stopped at the farther end of the hall, and from it emerged the figures of Georges and Gus.

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN BUNDESEN, M. D.

Avoiding Eyestrain

The condition of eye-strain is of such importance that all of us may well give it consideration. In the prevention of eye-strain, proper lighting is important. Manufacturers in industry realize that the efficiency of all their employees is greater when lighting is adequate. In schools, it is particularly important that sufficient lighting of the right kind be maintained.

In recent years, there have been many new developments in methods of lighting. One of these is flourescent lighting. Many persons have the mistaken notion that such lighting may possess harmful qualities not found in other forms of artificial lighting or in daylight.

However, a careful study has been made of the matter by a committee of experts, and they have arrived at certain definite conclusions. Any type of lighting which gives off an excessive amount of ultraviolet rays may be injurious to the eyes. It has been found that the ultraviolet energy in clear summer skylight is three to four times as much as comes from fluorescent lights.

It has been found also that light from fluorescent lamps resembles daylight more closely than that from other types of electric light bulbs. This color resemblance to daylight is a desirable quality it has also been found that fluorescent light generates less heat than that from other types of lamps.

No matter what system of lighting is employed, a certain amount of glare may occur. This glare can be overcome in various ways, but it is no greater with fluorescent lights than with other types. Light is measured in a unit known as a foot-candle, which is the amount of light produced by a standard candle at a distance of one foot.

It has been found that twenty foot-candles of light are needed for such tasks as reading. Higher levels of light may be necessary for other tasks. These standards can be easily maintained through the use of properly installed fluorescent lighting.

An excessive amount of light may produce symptoms of eye strain. Hence, the lighting must be planned so as to furnish just enough illumination without an excess. Flickering of the lights is also troublesome. With fluorescent lighting, flickering is reduced to a minimum.

The final conclusion of this group of experts was that fluorescent lighting is not harmful to the eyesight and will not produce eyestrain if properly installed and used.

WHY WASTE COAL?

One of a series of articles intended to help solve heating problems and conserve fuel.

The problem of conserving fuel in the small apartment building is slightly more complicated than in the one-family home. Where there are four or more apartments in one building it is impossible ot obtain the proper temperature in all the apartments by the installation of one thermostat.

Usually the janitor maintains a given steam pressure for the entire building and then allows the tenants to regulate the temperature to suit themselves by turning the radiators off or on. But this method can be carried still further. The janitor can save considerable coal by varying the central steam pressure to correspond with the outside temperature. For example, on a zero day it may take 10 pounds of steam to keep the entire building warm; whereas, when the outside temperature rises to 50 degrees, he can keep the tenants comfortable with only a half-pound of steam, and even this small amount may be necessary only for a few hours in the morning.

There are several devices on the market which will make these pressure adjustments automatically. A typical such device consists of a thermostatic bulb, mounted on the outside of the building, which controls the steam pressure in accordance with the outside temperature. Most types include a refueling device and provisions to reduce the temperature at night. Practically any heating engineer, contractor or equipment dealer can furnish details as to the cost and advisability of putting such equipment in any particular plant. We believe they are worth while.

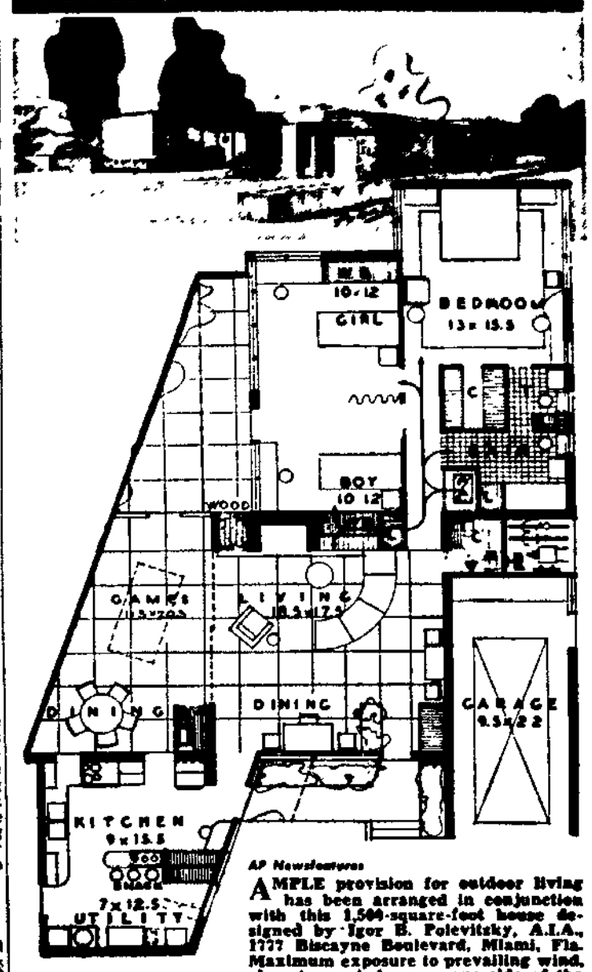
MAKING STEPS SAFER

When cellar steps are dark and risky to descend and mount, it is a good plan to paint the edges of the treads with a band of white or aluminum paint to increase their visibility. It is also a good idea to paint the bottom step a solid white.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS



AP Newsfeatures

AMPLE provision for outdoor living has been arranged in conjunction with this 1,500-square-foot house designed by Igor B. Polevitzky, A.I.A., 1777 Biscayne Boulevard, Miami, Fla. Maximum exposure to prevailing wind, clerestory windows on one side of the utility and living areas and thorough ventilation of bedrooms also suggest indoor activities. The children's bedrooms, separated by folding partitions, provide a daytime playroom. Flexible bath facilities, efficient kitchen and storage for everything from bicycles to linens are offered. The centrally located air conditioning and heating unit requires minimum duct work.

areas and doors of glass opening on a terrace or garden.

With this is a demand for an open floorplan, with fewer partitions, and with segregation achieved by arrangement of furniture, built-in cabinets, book cases and desks, or with curtains which may be drawn when desirable, between the living room and dining room, or in bedrooms. Many bedrooms will be designed for study and reading, as well as sleeping.

Engineered storage space will be a "must," the editors insist. By this is meant not only closets, but also larger cabinets in the bathrooms, and carefully dimensioned space to store possessions, record albums, golf bags, card tables, garden furniture, children's toys, and other items.

Want More Leisure

Home buyers will welcome halls with walls consisting of storage cabinets, say the editors. Such areas usually are difficult to furnish, and the pattern of doors, drawers and cupboards offer enough contrast to break the monotony of the walls.

Above all else, housewives say, "I want a house that reduces daily chores and drudgery to a minimum—one that I can run instead of one that runs me. I want leisure to read, to play with the children, and to garden."

And so there is a demand for completely equipped, well-planned kitchens, and with the electrified laundry moved from the dark, dismal basement to a bright, cheerful utility room, perhaps on the first floor.

In a word, say the editors, people want more livability and less formality in the homes they build or buy.

Between 1841 and 1861, American tonnage in foreign trade rose from 762,838 to 2,496,899 tons.

First Aid To Ailing House

By Roger C. Whitman

SCREENS IN WINTER

Q.: Does it do any harm to leave full length screens on the windows throughout the winter? On the lower floor we can remove them, but we thought of leaving the upper floor screens in place, as there is no man about to remove them.

A.: If you leave the screens in place all through the winter there is no telling just what might happen to them, and it might cost more next spring to put them in condition than to have them removed this fall. Surely there must be a handy-man or carpenter in your community or town, if it is of any size. He could take down the screens and put up storm sash in their places. If you do not already have storm sash, is would be most advisable to plan to get them.

RATTLING WINDOWS

Q.: We live in a house that is 20 years old that has only half a basement. The windows rattle and the house shakes underfoot. Can you advise?

A.: For the loose windows one good cure would be to have metal weatherstrips installed, preferably by an experienced workman. Another method (for the lower sash) is to take off the strips of moulding that form the front edges of the grooves in which the sashes slide, and to replace them to make a snugger fit. Ask at a hardware or dime store for rubber wedges (or substitutes) made to stop the rattling of loose windows. For the vibration of the house when anyone walks through the rooms, that is a condition that requires structural work done by a competent builder. Some of the beams may need bracing.

HOME WORK

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Ill. — City Fireman Leonard Tanner was right on the job when the fire broke out—even though it was his day off.

He heard an alarm sound at the fire station less than a half block away and jumped up. Then, remembering he was off duty, resumed his comfortable position. Smelling smoke, he checked quickly and found a fire at his own back door step.

Tanner had the blaze under control as fellow firemen arrived.

Plenty of Light Called For in Planning of New Homes

A home-hungry public insistently calls for new homes with the inside wedded to the outdoors. It does not want four walls to serve as barriers, but homes which open to light, sunshine, fresh air, and the garden or lawn.

This demand was strongly reflected as a symposium by the editorial staffs of seven leading home and women's magazines which Architectural Forum presented in a recent issue to architects and builders.

Painting a picture of an essentially conservative public, yet a public which expects and is eager to accept sensible innovations in design, the editors report that people do not want homes to be an imitation of the past, but a combination of the best of the old and the new.

Results Chief Aim

As one editor said, prospective home buyers "want the function of modern architecture without the look of modern."

Every survey, the editors report, clearly indicates a strong desire for more windows, larger windows, and more interesting windows, and greater use of glass as partitions and for mirror and walls to give rooms larger dimensions. Many seek a living or dining room which merges with the out-of-doors, with large wall

EVER HEAR OF RADIANT HEATING?

Radiant heating is the most efficient way of heating your home. By a system of coils under your floor, through which hot water is pumped from your heating boiler, this radiant heating of your rooms is accomplished.

Benefits derived by this method of heating are many: no drafts, no cold floors, even temperature at both ceiling and floor, no radiators or registers, no currents of hot air to deposit grime on your ceilings and walls.

If you are planning to build a new home, by all means investigate this superior way of house heating which is not an experiment, but tried and proven throughout the country and is being successfully used right here in Marion.

We will be glad to furnish additional information at no obligation.

Here's one debt you get paid for paying!

Part of the debt we owe our fighting men we can't repay. But part of it, we can.

We can see that when they come home they get a decent job and a decent place to live. If they're wounded, we can make sure they get the finest medical care and any other help that we can give.

The easiest, most effective way to pay this part of our debt is to buy extra Bonds in the Victory Loan.

And when you pay your debt this way, you actually get paid for doing it!

For in 10 years, you'll get all your money back—with interest. With interest, and without risk—for Victory Bonds are the world's safest investment.

For your fighting men — for your own sake—for your Country—buy extra Bonds!

Following the Victory Loan, the sale of E, F, and G U. S. Savings Bonds will continue through regular authorization agencies and through the Payroll Savings Plan.

HEALTH SEALS GO IN MAIL

County Quota Raised from $5,000 to $5,500 Chairman May Reports.

The annual sale of Christmas Health Seals sponsored by the Marion County Anti-Tuberculosis Association got under way today when letters containing the seals were posted in the mail today for delivery to homes of Marion city and county residents on Monday. The quota to be raised in the county this year is $5,500, A. C. May, seal sale chairman, announced today. The quota is $500 higher than last year.

This year's seal was designed by Park Phipps, head of the department of advertising and printing design at the Art Institute in Chicago. The design shows a young boy carrying home a gay holly wreath tide with a festive red bow. The background is a white house with a tall picket fence and in front of the boy is the traditional double-barred cross, emblem of the crusade for health.

For the first time in the 38 years' history of the Christmas seal the name of the artist appears on the seal.

Only five per cent of the amount raised in the county is forwarded to the National association and the remainder is spent in the state, Mrs. Walter E. Miley, secretary of the county association, points out. Tuberculosis, she emphasizes, is more than a local problem and must be attacked on all fronts, and through the national association, each local group can benefit from its research.

TO WED AT RICHWOOD

RICHWOOD, Nov. 17—Mr. and Mrs. Homer S. Fox of Richwood are announcing the approaching marriage of their daughter, Audrey, to Tom Mayte of Akron.

The double ring ceremony will be read at an open church wedding at 2:00 p. m. Wednesday, Nov. 21, in the First Baptist church with the Rev. Donald Hobbs officiating.

The bride-elect has asked her sister, Mrs. A. L. Lindsay to be her matron of honor. Miss Wanda Martino and Mrs. Calvin Wells will serve as bridesmaids. Phyllis Cheney and Helen Cramer will light the candles. Anna Kay Gray will be flower girl.

Selections will be played at the organ by Mrs. Charles Gill. The vocalist will be William LeMasters.

Edward Block of Akron will act as best man for Mr. Mayte. George Chima and Charles Hamlet, both of Akron, will seat the wedding guests.

Following the ceremony there will be a reception with Mrs. Neva Harger and her assistants as hostesses.

Mr. Mayte recently received his honorable discharge from the 9th Air Force after completing 75 missions in the European theatre of operation as a fighter pilot.

Wives and Children Still Carry On

Frequent mention is made in the newspapers of the mothers of servicemen, but the thousands of wives who are separated from their husbands seem to be the forgotten women. Many, many homes are disrupted by the absence of husband and father. Young wives are trying to be both mother and father to their children. We older ones on the home front can often lend a helping hand in their problems Let's all stop and think if we know of such a home where we could be a help from time to time.

Another Commission

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister Mackenzie King have labored over the atomic bomb puzzle and brought forth a commission. There was nothing else they could do.

Their simultaneous decision to keep the secret of manufacturing atomic bombs cannot be rated as an accomplishment, because it was the only decision possible under existing circumstances. Even had they wanted to share it, there was no practical way to do so, lacking a United Nations security council. The proposal to set up a United Nations commission to make recommendations will accomplish nothing directly, but it testifies to the earnest desire of the United States, Great Britain and Canada to ease international apprehension.

The commission is charged, among other things, with the duty of making specific proposals for eliminating from national armaments major weapons adaptable to mass destruction. This suggests a nice distinction. Clearly, the atomic bomb is adaptable to mass destruction. But vastly more destruction was wrought in Germany and Japan by ordinary bombs. This conceivably is the opening wedge of a proposal for disarmament.

Lock-the-Barn-Door Policy

GEN. EISENHOWER'S testimony on military training before the house military affairs committee puts the emphasis where it belongs—on avoidance of war. He wants to lock the barn door this time before the horse is stolen.

He shares with Gen. Marshall, chief of staff, a conviction that the United States has invited war by weakness.

The simplest, but strongest, argument for military training is that by strengthening itself the United States can strengthen the world's peace bloc. The argument that military training would make this a militarist country is as absurd as to claim that fire drills make pyromaniacs. No one is better able to realize how slight is the American taste for militarism than the general in charge of American occupation of Germany. With the war over, the great desire of our civilian fighting men is to put militarism behind them.

Their very desire for peace—the nation's desire for peace—has betrayed it, in Gen. Eisenhower's opinion. It has expressed itself in lack of military preparation, and lack of military preparation has invited attack.

In two wars in this century, America has locked the barn door after the horse was stolen. Its professional defenders are in unanimous agreement that it would be wise to lock the barn door before a third emergency arises.

True Collective Bargaining

THE FORD MOTOR CO'S blunt declaration to United Automobile Workers (CIO) that the company's future is at stake unless it can be guaranteed security against violations of collective bargaining contracts is a reflection of all management's position.

A contract is an agreement that must be kept inviolate by the parties which enter it, or there is no point in making it. Labor unions, having won the undisputed right to bargain collectively and enter into contracts with employers, now must prove they are able and willing to keep the contracts they make.

Otherwise, of course, there can be no true collective bargaining. Unless unions which hold the power of life and death over enterprise accept responsibility to use their power to preserve the means of their members' livelihood, there will be no unions and no enterprise. A tremendous responsibility has been settled on the American labor movement; it has not demonstrated so far that it is ready to exercise as much responsibility as it has been given.

This is the issue in the labor-management conference. Beyond that, it is the issue in congress, which makes the laws. And beyond that, it is the issue between workers and managers, who can combine their efforts to produce the nation's wealth only to the extent that they can trust each other as responsible parties in whatever working agreements they make.

One World in Fact

FINALLY it is dawning on Americans that the work their scientists and engineers did on atomic bombs was made possible by scientific research that had no national boundaries. The only genuinely original contribution made by the United States was the organization that made it possible to manufacture the bombs.

The manufacturing process, in other words, is our secret—and even it is a secret whose key consists largely of the availability of uranium in Canada and the wealth and resources of the United States that were drawn on so heavily for the construction of plants. Furthermore, it is shared in some degree with Great Britain and Canada.

The research in atomic energy that led to the manufacture of an atomic bomb occurred in many places and the results were available to scientists in many lands. Much is owed to Germans, Italians, Danes, Britons and Frenchmen, as well as to Americans. Knowledge in atomic research was shared internationally before the war.

Atomic Bomb Decision Late

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Would Have Been Statesmanship in August.

HAD the declaration on atomic energy been made in August instead of in November, it would have been greeted as an inspired act of statesmanship. But in these three months of delay the international atmosphere has, as the New York Herald Tribune points out, been so poisoned that we must now use these proposals to begin repairing the mischief that, made sooner, they would have done so much to prevent.

There is nothing in the declaration that could not have been said in August, proposed at Potsdam, announced to the world after the surrender of Japan. The British and the American governments knew in July, as a result of the experiment in New Mexico, that the bomb had been successfully manufactured. Nothing is now known about the international problems that was not known then to the high officials of both governments, and their failure to prepare a plan can perhaps be explained, but it is not easily excused. The only explanation is that the state department and the foreign office did not foresee the grave political importance of the atomic bomb.

While there is no use crying over spilt milk, it is important that this failure be admitted now. The confession should do something to reduce the suspicions, which are by no means confined to the Soviet Union, that Great Britain and the United States have not been acting as trustees of this terrible weapon, but have been disposed to regard it as a military asset to be used in weighing the balance of power decisively in their own favor. These suspicions, which unfortunately are not entirely groundless, it will now take a great deal of effort inside both governments and among the other nations to dispel.

A Middle So Far

If the declaration can now be treated on its merits, it contains everything that any one could ask or desire as the beginning of an international solution. All depends on whether it is followed quickly by constructive proposals designed by men of vision and knowledge. For this is not a matter that can be left to the Philistines who have thus far made such an unholy muddle of it.

It is plain that a great opportunity has been opened up by the declaration that we intend to make available to all nations "the basic scientific information essential to the development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes." This can and should be used to create, under the auspices of the United Nations Organization, some kind of congress or institute to which all men of science who deal with atomic energy would belong. Through it they would exchange information, to it they could come for guidance and help in their research, in it they would become personally acquainted.

This is the best possible safeguard that can now be established against the sinister and secret use of atomic energy for sabotage and war. The close association of men of science is the highest and most effective form of "inspection." For it would be impossible for any government to manufacture atomic energy without its own most eminent men of science knowing about it. It is very hard to hide the eminent scientists of any country, and it would be extremely difficult for them, if they were in regular contact and correspondence with their colleagues in other countries, to practice concealment and deception.

Next Step

The declaration looks beyond this to what would be in effect international legislation to regulate the production and use of atomic energy in peace and in war. It will be the business of the commission to propose such legislation—no doubt in the form of conventions and treaties—to the United Nations Organization. It is here, of course, that there will be the greatest skepticism, mankind having so much reason to be disillusioned about the sincerity and effectiveness of international agreements.

"However, there is a way, I believe, by which the commission can deal with its task which opens up immense possibilities for good. That is to invoke the principle that rules and regulations agreed to by the government shall become binding upon individuals. Thus a violation of the agreements would become, like piracy, a crime for which the individual could be tried and punished. This is the principle we are invoking in the Nuernberg trials and there is every reason why in regulating atomic energy we should make it a personal crime to do whatever the United Nations agree is to be forbidden.

This is not an unprecedented proposal. In Article III of the Washington Treaty of 1922 dealing with submarine warfare and poison gas, it is set down that "any person in the service of any power who shall violate any of those rules, whether or not such person is under orders of a governmental superior, shall be deemed to have violated the laws of war and shall be liable to trial and punishment as if for an act of piracy and may be brought to trial before the civil or military authorities of any power within the jurisdiction of which he may be found."

Seeds of Government

Here, as every student of our own Federalist papers knows is the principle by which the reign of a wider law can be extended over the smaller law of separate sovereign states. It is by making the individual, not his national government, accountable under international law that we shall make a real advance in the authority of international law.

Here, too, I submit, is the essential truth in the growing conviction that in the atomic age an association of governments is not enough to keep the peace and that there must be a "world government." Plans for world government which call for a world legislature and a world executive take hold of the problem at the hardest and least hopeful and probably also the least desirable end.

The right end at which to begin is, I believe, to establish the principle that there are crimes for which an individual anywhere can be tried and punished under international law, crimes for which his own government cannot give him immunity, crimes which no government can order him to commit without the members of that government becoming themselves international criminals.

That will not give us a world government. But it will give us the foundations, which can be enlarged, of a true world community of individuals, over and above any leagues or alliances of sovereign states.

Getting Ahead of Priorities

By Paul B. Mason

COL. T. B. HOLLIDAY

(Last in a Series of Articles)

DAYTON, O.—Planning of tomorrow's planes and the thousand and one items which put them into the air is being conducted at Wright Field these days on a theory that except for rare emergencies, the "need for any priority, on a given item, is itself a sign of faulty anticipation."

That quotation actually is an oft-expressed warning of Col. T. B. Holliday, Chief of the Air Technical Service Command's Equipment Laboratory located at Wright Field.

At weekly staff meetings, when many among hundreds of research and development projects come up for review—or for initial approval—the theme is repeated time and again.

Why [illegible] priority?" he asks. Why haven't we tackled this problem before?"

Holliday, one of the country's outstanding electrical geniuses, speaks little and for the most part softly but his continual 'carping' on the subject, staff subordinates say, sped new or improved gadgets into combat theaters in short order during the war.

Maj. Haskell R. Collins, Dunwer-born chief of Planning, described one of these as the automatic pilot for fighter planes—made necessary when B-29 strikes against Japan were wearing the hearts out of P-47 and P-51 pilots who flew escort.

At one critical time late in the European war, the Laboratory was flooded with reports that shafts were snapping on generators which supplied (or powered) the turrets on B-24s.

Strengthening of parts proved ineffective. Old heads were turning grayer by the day—until a chance test laid the trouble to vibration set up after paddle-type propellers were substituted for earlier types. The "paddle-props" bit deeper into the air, set up a new vibration frequency. The difficulty, "or 80 per cent of it," was licked by "torquing" or slanting of bolts on the generator units.

Still other problems, first encountered in the war, promise to use up plenty of midnight oil before they are solved.

Aids War on Crime

By The Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia—Improved crime prevention and detection methods are being fashioned by Colombian national police authorities as a safeguard against increased criminal activity which the postwar era might produce.

Colombia's mountain terrain in the past has been a handicap for fast-moving criminals from abroad but the new air age promises to eliminate such natural barriers.

Because of the international aspect of the crime problem Colombian officials have enlisted the collaboration of the U. S. Federal Bureau of Investigation which is assisting with police schools.

The United States has had a keen military interest in Colombia's control of criminals because of this country's proximity to the vital Panama Canal. So far as is known, no Axis saboteur sent to Colombia to hamper the Allied war effort ever got within striking distance of the canal.

Definition for Bargaining

By Raymond Moley

ONE of the real services which the current labor-management conference might perform would be to clarify some of the terms now commonly accepted in labor disputes. Two of these terms seem to have so obvious a meaning that no one questions them. They are "collective bargaining" and "jurisdictional strikes." The administration, as well as the generality of the people of the country, is for the first and against the second.

But it is quite clear that people think of many different things when they use these words.

Let's take a look today at the first of these phrases.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corp. and Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach are engaged in seeking a definition which covers the steel dispute. The secretary said in a letter to Mr. Fairless:

"When a company and its employes collectively bargain they sit around a table in a spirit of good will and discuss freely and frankly the positions of the respective parties." But Mr. Schwellenbach almost immediately finds it necessary to fill in the generality of his definition by saying, "The government is not insisting upon any agreement from your corporation as to a wage increase. All the government asks is that in the presence of one of its representatives you attempt to collectively bargain with your employes."

Where The Rub Comes

In short, there can be collective bargaining without the yielding of a wage increase, but the government must, by the presence of its representative, determine that collective bargaining actually takes place. But how is the government conciliator to judge whether collective bargaining takes place? Are mutual concessions essential? If so, then wages go up with each successive negotiation.

Or put it the other way. Suppose business conditions are bad and the company wants to bargain for a cut. Will collective bargaining take place if no cut is conceded by the union? And does the employer have to suggest a big cut in order to provide the opportunity for mutual concessions?

President Truman adds to the definitions the condition that collective bargaining be "in good faith." The unions would interpret "good faith" to mean that the employer put in evidence a revelation of the company's income. How is this to be interpreted by the government's representative? The competitive angle is involved here, especially in matters of cost. And to reveal these facts to the union would, no doubt, reveal them to competitors. To require universal publication of operating results would be to propose something new in this country, and a great protest would result. For one thing, it would greatly accelerate mergers, because every effort to make costs uniform promotes mergers. This runs squarely counter to the eternal efforts of government to keep businesses from getting too big.

Penalty Proposed

Senator Murray proposes that congress amend the tax laws so that any company which fails to bargain "in good faith" be denied the benefit of tax refunds. Considering Senator Murray's loose use of language in his full employment bill, he would probably permit government administrators to form their own definition of "good faith."

Then, with collective bargaining proceeding under a threat from the government, what becomes of Secretary Schwellenbach's requirement that collective bargaining proceed "freely?"

Sun's Effect on Foods

Certain foods that are full of sunlight pack more food value, more energy, more health, than those raised in cloudy areas of the United States or in cloudy seasons, says Carroll F. Streeter, managing editor of Farm Journal, in the November issue.

The effect of the sun has been proved on tomatoes, turnip greens, apples, oranges, hay and milk, and no one knows how many other crops may likewise be affected, he points out.

Valuable information on the subject has resulted from experiments just completed by Dr. Karl C. Hammer and Dr. G. F. Somers at the U. S. Plant, Soil and Nutrition Laboratory at Cornell university.

Their experiments, Streeter reports, show that "the amount of Vitamin C depends directly on the amount of sunlight tomatoes get two or three weeks before picking. By varying the light, under artificial conditions indoors the Vitamin C in tomatoes can be increased almost 100 per cent. In turnip greens the C can be boosted 800 per cent.

"It's the sunlight acting on the tomato itself—not on the vine—that makes the difference," Streeter says.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

If You Ran Your Home the Washington Way

"NOW, Matilda, everything is in a jam, we'd better do something about it."

"What'll we do, Chet?"

"Well, we owe a lot of money, there's a pile of big bills ahead and we're pretty short, so the thing to do is to increase the running expenses around here."

"Increase the running expenses when we're in a deep hole already, Chet?"

"Yep. I've been reading the papers and that's how it's done. Give the hired man 20 per cent more, take more pin money for yourself, give the kids more spending money and see what we can do about lending some out to the neighbors. That'll straighten us out."

"We have just cut out a lot of things that were bringing us in money."

"That's okay. Cut down the income and increase the outgo. We gotta beware of inflation."

"It don't sound right to me."

"Washington says it's the only way. By the way, call up the butcher and promise to spend twice as much next week. And remind me to send a check to that wild man down the street who keeps asking me for a loan."

"But that fellow knocks you all the time, fights everything you try to do and has an entirely different idea of the way of life than we have. He would smash the things we stand for."

"That's all right. Lend him some money. Be generous. And don't forget to remind me to phone the carpenter to build me a wing on the house and a couple of new barns. I think I should add a thousand head of cattle too."

"But where will we get the money?"

"We can borrow it from friends."

"But can we pay it back?"

"You worry too much, Matilda. Be big."

"Chet, I just don't understand. If I spend six dollars and only have one dollar I'm in debt four dollars, ain't I?"

"Nonsense. You're really ahead six dollars."

• • •

"Well, even if I have six dollars I can't send fifty, buy a fur coat for a hundred and rebuild the house for eighty-five dollars and be financially sound."

"You can do it and be away ahead of the game. I got it direct from a radio address. Inflation ain't a thing to be fooled with by halfway measures."

• • •

"Chet, I even think it might be a good idea to consult the books, strike a balance and see how we stand."

"Just what I feared. You're a dangerous person to have around in times like these. The house ain't safe against inflation with you handling money."

"Do you really think we're heading for inflation, Chet?"

"Leave everything to me. I'll stop it if I have to spend the last dollar we ain't got to get everything in town that we don't need."

Jerome Kern, whose death was a blow to the world of music, composed countless melodies of loveliness. We always thought "They Didn't Believe Me," one of his earliest, one of his best. "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" is one of his most famous, and, believe it or not, it was the least liked by the producers of the musical in which it was introduced. In fact it was almost dropped from the score, only to live and become one of the standout tunes of the past quarter century.

The winners of the World War would probably call a peace conference, except that they think there are enough wars on already.

Stalin is still missing. It is just possible that Josef Stalin wants to know where he is before the Russian system of secrecy about all things, no Russian will be allowed to tell him.

The Awkward Age

By Truman Twill

He pours a spoonful of soup in his lap when he misses his mouth and does not notice it because he is knocking over a glass of milk at the same time. In his haste to get away from the deluge, the table cloth gets entangled and he knocks over everything else.

With the loose-jointed ease of a clown, he stumbles over his feet on the way across the living room and measures himself on the rug. Grinning in embarrassment he scrambles to get up, nudges a table, and upsets a lamp and a vase of flowers.

His passages to and fro in the household are greeted with hollow groans of pain as the other residents tardily pull in their feet, because he treads on them impartially, with the best of intentions and no malice, but with execution that would be a credit to a bull in a china shop.

Chairs rock in his wake. Glassware plummets to the floor and tinkles into splinters. Doors creak and shatter as he walks through them without bothering to open them. Staircases are hazards to be taken in stride; he can fall up them or down them with equal ease.

In a tussle he is a juggernaut of flailing feet that land on his surprised victims like blackjacks wielded by a whirling dervish. One never can be sure whether an encounter with him is with a friend or foe, because in either case the other party's shins will be lacerated and toes cracked.

Singlehanded, he keeps the mortality rate among drinking glasses, pop bottles, plates and cups in the high brackets. He drops jellied bread on the dining carpet upside down and in the scramble to retrieve it steps on the bread and his own fingers.

He rounds corners and shakes the house as he inadvertently throws a body block into the wall. A milk bottle on a back porch is certain to be punted not in anger, not in sport, but in the purest of accidental mis-steps.

The pages of books are torn. Windows are cracked, and pictures rattle in their places. Coats are split open in the process of being put on and taken off. Hats are lost, shoestrings broken, buttons ripped off, shrubbery trampled, refrigerator doors left open, lights left on, bathtubs left undrained and mirrors cracked.

And his mother and father systematically and quietly go mad, wondering which will come to the end of the rope first—themselves or the awkward age that their pride and joy is passing through.

Vernon avenue and Church street. The Thanksgiving proclamation by the President or the United States will be read by the first reader. This will be followed by the lesson-sermon especially prepared for Thanksgiving day. The subject will be "Thanksgiving" and will have for the Golden Text: "Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In every thing gives thanks" (I Thessalonians 5.16-18) A solo, "Make a Joyful Noise" will be sung by the soloist. The remainder of the hour will be given to testimonies, and expressions of gratitude.

The service will be concluded with the benediction, Philippians 4:20, "Now Unto God and Our Father be Glory For-ever and ever, A-men."

Similar services in observance of Thanksgiving day are held by The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. and its branches throughout the United States.

Methodists Planning "Our House" Banquet

Plans are being completed for the fourth annual "Our House" banquet in Epworth Methodist church basement Tuesday, Nov 27. Four years ago the Epworth congregation acquired the house at 129 South Vine street as a youth center. The theme will be "Just at Home" and the event will be sponsored by the Youth Fellowship groups with dinner at 6:30 p. m. and a program following. The general committee is composed of members of the youth recreation commission committee, Arlene Houpt, Robert Eckert and Charles Brown, and chairman of the various committees include Mrs. Jane Townley, program; Patricia Zahn and Dave Brown, tickets; decorations, Lois Jean Murray; hostess, Mrs. Donna Porter; Peggy Stroup and Elaine Ballinger, publicity. Two hundred reservations are available, it was announced.

Annual Thankoffering Program Arranged

During the morning worship service at the First Evangelical and Reformed church the annual Thankoffering service of the Women's Guild will be conducted. The subject for the service is "I Have a Goodly Heritage" and the material has been arranged by Mrs. Annetta H. Winter of Prospect. The program will be under leadership of Mrs. Vernon Street, assisted by Mrs. Donald Augenstein. The congregation and the Girl's Guild will also participate. Rev. E. H. Wierth, pastor, will speak on "Thanksgiving. A Thank Offering." The choir will sing "Come Unto Me," by Shelley, and a duet, "When Thy Heart With Joy Overflowing," will be sung by Oscar Retterer and Mrs. Esther Knickle.

CHIANG CRACKS 'WALL' DEFENSE

Nationalists Drive Reds from Gateway City Leading to Manchuria.

By The Associated Press

CHINWANGTAO, Nov. 17 — Chinese Nationalist army headquarters announced its troops captured Shanhaikwan yesterday forcing the Chinese Communist Eighth Route army to abandon the great wall gateway into Manchuria.

(The Chungking press today reported, however, that Chinese government officials who earlier had accepted control of postal and telegraph facilities from the withdrawing Russians at Changchun, Manchurian capital, were returning to Chungking.

Loss Protection

(They had lost the protection of the Soviet occupation garrison, these reports said, and "fully armed" Chinese Communists have been seen in the vicinity of Changchun).

Shanhaikwan is about 10 miles north of Chinwantao, where U. S. Marines are guarding the railway southward to Tientsin.

General Tu Li-ming, commander of the Nationalist forces assigned to take over Manchuria after Russian withdrawal, said the Nationalists were concerned principally with reopening the Tientsin-Mukden railway, and would insist the Chinese Communists withdraw at least 50 kilometers (about 32 miles) from the rail line.

Tu volunteered the opinion that American combat planes flying low over the area may have caused the Communists to believe they were about to be strafed. "So they withdrew from their positions," he added.

Two-Day Attack

Additional reports on gunfire attacks on a train bearing U. S. Marine Maj. Gen. Dewitt Peck, commander of the First Marine division, and a detachment of leathernecks from Tientsin to Chinwangtao, said the attack continued for two days.

The Marines returned the fire, said one officer, who declared "we retain the right to defend ourselves when attacked."

The Marines interpreted the attacks as attempts to prevent repairs to the railroad.

CARSON J. COOK NAMED INSURANCE AGENCY HEAD

Appointed Commonwealth Life Co. District Manager

Carson J. Cook, former Marion county Farm Bureau agent, was recently appointed manager of the central Ohio agency for the Commonwealth Life Insurance Co. of Louisville, Ky. and has established offices at 197 West Center street in the Leetonia building. He succeeds the late Roy W. Kauble, former manager of the area.

Mr. Cook lives with his wife and two children at 131 Uhler avenue. He served as Farm Bureau agent here for more than a year before he was transferred to the Springfield, O., branch. While associated with the Bureau he was named outstanding producer in 1943 for central Ohio and later won an award offered by the Managers and General Agents association for the district.

In his present capacity as insurance manager he has nine associates in Marion and vicinity.

Prince Edward Island is the smallest of Canada's provinces.

Doom of 30 Nazis First Big Dose in Purging of World

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Writer

You don't have to be vindictive or cold-blooded to feel extreme satisfaction that justice has overtaken Josef Kramer, the 'Beast of Belsen," and twenty-nine others who perpetrated the horrors of the Belsen and Oswiecim concentration camps.

The story isn't yet complete. A British military court at Luenburg has convicted these fiends who killed by torture for the pleasure they got out of it. The wages of their sins still have to be collected — and the world at large hopes that payment will be made in full.

D. Mackenzie

These sins are to well known to need much repetition here. Tens of thousands of wretched prisoners (nobody knows just how many) were killed by slow and deliberate starvation. The practices of Kramer and his evil crew were a throwback to the darkest days of primitive man.

It would be a welcome relief if we could say that the deeds at these two camps were isolated instances. But these sadistic murderers represent far more than the atrocities for which they personally were responsible. They typify the fanatical Nazi of all ranks, for Hitler and Goering and the other leaders inspired this crime, even if they didn't carry it out personally.

Hitler Worst Of All

The Nazi fuehrer was one of the most terrible mass-murderers of all time. Kramer rubbed his hands over the slaughter of thousands, while Hitler dealt death to millions. But the point is that Kramer got his ideas from the fuehrer. So did others like fat Hermann Goering, Hitler's second in command, who wouldn't raise his rejeweled hands to commit murder personally but dictated orders which brought the tragedies of war and extermination to a countless host.

Unfortunately this barbarism hasn't been confined to Europe. The Allies have encountered it in terrible forms in the orient, and the Japs not only committed atrocities against our troops but did hideous things to civilians, even little children, in the countries which Nippon overran.

Thus one of the greatest tasks of rehabilitation which the Allies must perform, both in Europe and in the far east, is to wipe out this evil influence — the blood-lust which leads to wars. There's only one way to do it, and that is to run to earth and bring to trial every man and woman suspected of atrocities. And the thing must cut deeper than that, because the war-lords also must suffer for aggression.

That is being done.

Carole Landis' Zipper Zips Ohioan to Jug

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 17 — The press agent who turned up the other day with a story of a man breaking into Carole Landis' dressing room and trying to unzip the zipper of her black tights, created no stir in the newsrooms.

After all, a press agent's job is to try to get a movie star's name in print.

But in jail today, booked on an "attempt rape" notation, was a man who, Detective C. C. Forbes said, identified himself as Charles L. Graumlich, 31, an attorney who came here three months ago from Marietta, O.

"I deny it," he protested as he was being questioned.

Det. Lieut. L. R. Veit said Miss Landis reported she was in her dressing room Wednesday when the door opened and a stranger asked where he could find Carole Landis. When she identified herself, Veit said, she continued, he attempted to embrace her.

She said she fought him off, and he fled as she screamed.

ORATORIO SOLOISTS CHOSEN BY CHORUS

"The Messiah" To Be Presented Dec. 16.

Soloists for "The Messiah," to be presented by Marion Civic Chorus Sunday night, Dec. 16, in the Epworth Methodist church, were announced Friday in a luncheon board meeting at Hotel Harding.

Those taking solo parts in the oratorio will be Mrs. Helen Holcher of Westerville, second vice president of the Ohio Federation of Music clubs, contralto, Mrs. Albert Grisdorfe of Columbus, soprano, Clarence Ball of Toledo, tenor and Knox Dunlop, also of Toledo, bass.

L. G. Jones, supervisor of music in Marion public schools will be conductor, Mrs. E. N. Hale will be assistant director and Homer Huffman will conduct the orchestral arrangement. Accompanists will be Miss Rosaline Manzo, pianist, Miss Maye Evangeline Lawrence, organist, and Mrs. Eliza Williams, assistant organist. Mrs. Gerald Jennings is assistant pianist.

The chorus will rehearse Sunday at 3:30 p. m. with L. G. Jones directing, at Emanuel Lutheran church.

U. S. EYES TAX-FREE UNIONS AND CO-OPS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 — A treasury report that 28,636 labor unions took in $389,686,000 in one year brought renewed insistence among some lawmakers today that curbs be placed on union financial contributions in elections.

Congress also confronted one of its most explosive task problems as the report disclosed that tax-exempt organizations, including unions and farm cooperatives, had gross income of $5,000,000,000 in 1943.

Farm co-ops, the report said, collected a gross of $2,233,904,000.

The report on income of tax-exempt organizations was prepared on instructions from congress, written into the tax law early last year when there was wide controversy over contributions to political campaigns.

Rep. Smith (D-Va), co-author of the Smith-Connally War Labor Disputes act, said this report "shows a very definite need for strengthening the corrupt practices law to prevent unions from financing elections, as was done in 1944."

Taking note of the gross income of co-ops, Chairman George (D-Ga) of the senate finance committee said:

"We have got to look into this matter from a tax viewpoint. The co-ops are growing by leaps and bounds. The possibilities of their qualifying for tax exemption have multiplied. They present a problem not only for other enterprise, but they are a tax problem."

New Red Cross Course Started

The first class of a 15-hour course on accident prevention being conducted by the Marion County Chapter of the American Red Cross was held Friday night in the chapter office with 17 members enrolled.

B. B. Gallagher, chairman of the committee and instructor, placed special emphasis on prevention of the most common type of accidents, those in the home and on the farm.

Assisting as instructors for the course are U. A. Nystrom and Alwyn H. Crane.

Any one wishing to enter the course may enroll at the Monday night meeting. Classes will start at 8 p. m. each Monday and Friday. On completion of the course there will be an instructors' course starting Dec 3 and running through Dec. 7. Allard C. Hardy, special field representative of the eastern Red Cross area, will be the instructor.

Presbyterian Church Aid Circle Entertained

Mrs. B. A. Davis of 225 Hane avenue entertained members of Circle No. 6 of the Ladies' Aid society of the First Presbyterian church last Thursday evening. Mrs. Roy Shipton served as assistant hostess. Mrs. J. A. McDowell was in charge of devotions which had "Thanksgiving" as the theme. A report of the general aid meeting was given by Mrs. Aaron Goetting. Mrs. Arthur McCausland read a paper entitled, "Come, Ye Thankful People, Come," and Mrs. L. E. Cookston presented a paper, "The Time for Thanksgiving." An apron auction was held. Mrs. Glenmore Hawkins won the guessing box. One new member, Mrs. F. A. Thompson, was enrolled.

NAVY LIFTS FREEZE ON ALMOST 25,000

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—The Navy has made eligible for discharge some 3,435 officers and 20,375 enlisted men previously "frozen" because need for their services was critical.

Of these, the department said, 2,350 officers and 7,392 enlisted men will have points enough for release by Jan. 1.

Enlisted classifications and point scores:

Shore patrol specialists, 38; disbursing storekeeper, male 44, female 29; key punch operator specialists, male 38, female 23. Punch card accounting machine operator specialists, male 44, female 29. Hospital corpsmen with specialty in occupational or physical therapy and assigned to duty in continental U. S. hospitals or naval special hospitals, male 44, female 29; transportation specialists, male 44, female 29.

Jap Plan for Sea Fight Bared

moved to a point 200 miles off Hawaii where 361 planes were launched in three waves, beginning at 6 a. m. and ending at 7:15.

"Original plans called for the retiring task force to strike at Midway, if possible, but, probably because of the presence of a United States task force south of Midway, that strike was not made," it was added.

Halsey Force Near

A task force under Admiral William F. Halsey Jr., had delivered planes to Midway and was on the way back to Pearl Harbor at the time of the Japanese attack.

Conception of the Japanese plan was credited to Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, commander of the Japanese fleet. Yamamoto was killed by American planes during the war, breaking the Japanese military codes had apprised the American forces Yamamoto was on the plane.

"Might Have"

Admiral Inglis testified today the Navy might have discovered the Japanese task force attacking Pearl Harbor if it had used its long-range patrol planes.

Under questioning by Senator Brewster (R-Me) Inglis told the committee that 69 PBY's, capable of flying a triangular course with 800-mile radius, were available for patrol work in December, 1941.

Previous Army and Navy investigations have indicated no long distance reconnaissance was being flown on the day of the attack. The Navy was charged with this responsibility under agreements made in the joint defense plan.

A flare-up between committee members and the admiral arose when Brewster accused Inglis of making an "unqualifiedly false" statement about the number of battleships in the Pacific and in the Atlantic.

Inglis testified yesterday that there were nine battleships in the Pacific and six in the Atlantic. Later it developed there were six with the Atlantic fleet but that the new battleships North Carolina and Washington also were in the Atlantic on "shakedown" cruises.

Barkley Steps In

When Brewster lashed out at the witness, Chairman Barkley (D-Ky) gavelled and remonstrated: "For a member of this committee to accuse a witness of making an unqualifiedly false statement seems out of order."

"I'm making a statement of fact," Brewster retorted.

The Maine senator launched into a lecture to the effect that he noticed "an attitude of mind, particularly on the part of the Navy, that congress is not entitled to information."

When Brewster subsided, the red-faced Inglis snapped:

"The senator from Maine has impugned my honesty and my motives," he told him. "I resent that."

Inglis went on to say that he thought he had made clear he was speaking of ships with the fleet, "not those in the blueprint stage, on the ways or not ready to join the fleet."

"I don't believe the Navy, certainly not myself, is trying to withohld any information whatsoever," he added.

Hull Enters Picture

Senator Brewster (R-Me) expressed the opinion that the Navy report was designed to show former Secretary of State Hull "was not responsible for the war."

Brewster said the summary undertakes to prove the Japanese decision to attack Pearl Harbor was made long before Hull's negotiations with Nipponese "peace" envoys reached their climax with the presentation of final American proposals on Nov. 25, 1941.

"I am friend of Mr. Hull, but that certainly is a partisan conclusion for the Navy to make. The committee, not the Navy, ought to make the conclusion."

Rep. Gearhart (R-Calif) declared his belief that the Japanese were "doing everything in their power" to reach agreement with the United States, adding that they regarded Hull's proposals as an ultimatum.

COURT OF HONOR HELD BY BOY SCOUT TROOP

Awards Made at Ceremony at Elks Lodge Room.

A court of honor for Troop 1 of the Boy Scouts was held Thursday night in the Elks lodge room with R. M. Miller as chairman and D. P. Gimmeson acting as scribe. The session opened with devotions followed by the various Scout awards. These awards were presented by the following men: second class, Willard Henney, troop committeeman; first class, Karl May, past exalted ruler of the Elks; merit badges, Owen A. Sifritt, Marion fire chief; star award, A. L. Kessler, exalted ruler; eagle, Rowland R. Peters of Bucyrus, council president.

Scouts who received awards included: Robert Drake, eagle badge; Bernard Wisebaker and Walter Bechtle, star award; Jerry Robinson, Jack Sayre and Donald Huffman, first class; Billy Hart and John Campbell, second class; merit badges were awarded to six Scouts for the following work: Jerry Robinson, wood work, home repairs, metal work and plumbing; Jack Sayre, home repairs, metal work and wood work; Robert Robinson, metal work; Bernard E. Wisebaker, safety, physical development and wood work; Walter Bechtle, safety, bugling, home repairs, metal work and physical development; Ronald Cox, safety.

The thirty-fourth charter was presented by R. M. Miller to Mr. Kessler who presented it to the scoutmaster. Membership cards were given by Karl Konkle, chairman of troop committeemen to Scouts and Scouters. Service stars were awarded to Bob Bull and Walter Bechtle and "green thumb" awards were presented to Scouts who raised gardens this past year. Entertainment included a whistling solo by Jack Campbell, a tap dance by Bernard Wisebaker and a talk by Charles Smith, who became an Eagle Scout in 1927.

JAVA PARLEY TONIGHT

By The Associated Press

CHURCH LEADERSHIP TRAINING PLANNED

Program Drawn at Meeting of County Group.

Plans were laid for a Marion County Leadership Training school when a planning committee of representatives from churches of Marion and the county met last Sunday afternoon at First Presbyterian church. The school will open Monday night, Jan. 7, and will continue each Monday night through Feb. 11 with sessions held from 7:30 to 9:30. The place is to be announced later. The school is planned and conducted under the auspices of the Marion County Council of Churches of which Rev. Eldred Johnston is president. Miss Madeline Mary Wynn, director of religious education of First Presbyterian church, has been named dean of the school.

It was agreed by the planning committee that stress should be placed on the fact that the school is open to all church people as well as to those who at present are leaders in church work, the purpose and aim being to clear the way for potential leaders to become actual workers in the churches of Marion and Marion county.

Churches which sent representatives to the meeting of the planning committee included Salem Evangelical and Reformed, First Evangelical and Reformed, Epworth Methodist, Calvary Evangelical, Central Christian, First United Brethren, Forest Lawn Presbyterian, First Presbyterian, Prospect Street Methodist, Memorial Methodist at Caledonia and Wesley Methodist.

Jap Korean Colonists Sadly Await Trip Back To Homeland

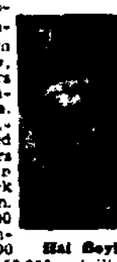
By HAL BOYLE
Associated Press Writer

FUSAN, Korea—Long lines of burdened Japanese men, women and children wait stolidly here for ships to carry them back to Japan, the "homeland" which many have never seen.

Koreans scream at them spitefully:

"You are trying to carry our country away on your backs!"

Returning ships from Japan unload thousands of Koreans in the greatest two-way mass migration in modern Asiatic history, ending 35 years of Japanese control over Korea.



Hal Boyle

More than 247,000 impressed Korean laborers have been brought back from Japan. Some 257,000 Japanese — including 99,000 troops and 158,000 civilians—have been ferried to Japan.

"We still have about three thousand Japanese soldiers and anywhere from a hundred thousand to five hundred thousand more Japanese civilians to get out of this country," said Maj. John M. Wilson, Philadelphia, Pa., the operations officer for the 10th division.

The center of this great shuttle ending Japan's continental empire is Pier Number One where thousands of Japanese "carpetbagging" families wait wearily for long hours to board jammed boats. They wait patiently with few complaints.

Little Fraternization

"If they haven't food, we give them enough from Jap army supply dumps to carry them across the straits," said Col. R. G. Stanton, Washington, D. C. "Our soldiers aren't rough with them but we don't mix with them in any way. We help women get their children up the gangplank safely and that's all."

A Japanese doctor delivered babies on four successive nights to women on the dock.

"All they ask for is a drink of coffee," an American officer said.

The stoic faces of the people on the pier show little of the distress mirrored in the countenances of European refugees. They suffer their fate calmly.

Each emigrant is inoculated against typhus and deloused—which is quite a game to the children as soldiers squirt DDT into their pants or kimonos.

Leave Much Behind

Each Japanese gets to take with him 1,000 yen in cash—$66—and all the household possessions he can carry. The bundles are gigantic. Behind them they leave farms, livestock, furniture, homes and investments. These are earmarked in their name and stored if possible—but few feel they will ever get them back.

American soldiers search every pack for hidden yen and weapons.

"They hide money everywhere but we don't think we miss much," said Capt. Granville Bushy, Roanoke, Va. "In one bamboo cane we found 80,000 yen—more than $5,000."

One of the most expert searchers is Tech. Sgt. Tony Segovia, San Leandro, Calif., who rooted 42,000 yen from a number of balls of yarn carried by one guileless looking old lady.

"She squawked considerably," said Tony, "when all she got back was a receipt."

Violators aren't punished except for removal of their money, which is deposited in their name in Korean banks. The deposits are, of course, frozen.

Limit Kimonos

Many refugees invested their extra wealth in kimonos so the Army permits them to take out only two or three. One Japanese girl had 40 new kimonos, Sgt. Segovia related, and when he took all but three away from her she cried and said:

"Now, how will I ever find a man in Japan to marry me?"

"I asked her if she epected to set her husband up in a department store," the seregant said.

TWO RICHWOOD BOYS FACE JUDGE MONDAY

Special to The Star

MARYSVILLE, Nov. 17—Two Richwood boys arrested Nov. 7 by county officers and held since then in the detention home here will be arraigned before Juvenile Judge John W. Dailey in Mayor Charles H. Brown's office in Richwood on Monday at 1:30 p. m. A third person arrested at the same time, a 26-year-old man from Richwood, is to be recommitted to a state mental institution, Judge Dailey announced today.

The boys are charged with tire theft and one also is charged with breaking and entering several homes in Richwood and the other with illegal possesion of stolen property.

Judge Dailey reported that property stolen from the home of Bessie Arehart in Richwood was found in possession of one. The 26-year-old man and one boy are also charged with having broken into Henry Adam's garage in Richwood one night last summer and stealing a tube from a spare tire.

WORKERS AT CANTON VOTE TO END STRIKE

By The Associated Press

CANTON, O., Nov. 17—Finas Reynolds, local CIO-United Steelworkers president, reported today nearly 8,000 production workers would return to their jobs at four Timken Roller Bearing Co. plants here Monday following a back-to-work vote of striking unionists ending a 33-day stoppgae.

"Maintenance workers are to report immediately, if they wish," Reynolds said after strikers voted 544 to 130 at a mass membership meeting last night to end the longest stoppage in Timken's 43-year history.

The stoppage, making 8,200 workers idle, resulted from the walkout of maintenance employes in a dispute involving work schedules. Suspension of a 10-inch mill crew which refused to work "short-handed" was another issue.

The stoppage closed the company's Zanesville, O., branch and seriously hampered production at Columbus, Wooster and Newton Falls, O., plants.

Group To Send Gifts to Veterans' Widows

Mrs. Beth Monk, past auxiliary president, was in charge of a meeting of Betsy Ross auxiliary to Marion Camp No. 32, United Spanish War Veterans Friday afternoon in the Legion Dugout, in the absence of the president, Mrs. Mercedes Byrnes.

The group voted to send Christmas boxes to widows of the United Spanish War Veterans at the Madison Home in Madison, O., and to the Veterans Hospital at Brecksville, O. A contribution of $3 was made to the Leonard Wood Memorial fund and they decided to buy gifts to be sent to the Ohio Soldiers and Sailors Home at Xenia.

Plans were made for a Christmas party and gift exchange at the December meeting with a dinner to be served at 6:30 p. m. for members of the camp and the auxiliary. Election of officers will also be held.

One new member was enrolled. Games were played with the award going to Mrs. Mabel Poulin. Hostesses were Mrs. Gertrude Kinnear, Mrs. Flossie Ooley, Mrs. Pauline Platz and Mrs. Aletha Schultz.

Y-Indus Club To Play Findlay Five Tonight

The Y-Indus Basketball team will meet the undefeated Findlay Five tonight in the Y.M.C.A. gym at 8 o'clock in a benefit game which marks the first of a series of activities of the Marion club which was recently reorganized after a period of inactivity.

Proceeds from tonight's game are to be used for the purchase of a movie projector to be presented to the local Y.M.C.A.

The team from Findlay is composed of ex-college and high school stars and is yet to be defeated. Admission for the game is 35 cents.

Members of the Y-Indus team include: Kenneth Somerlot, Harold Dillon, Robert Stoneburner, "Coxie" Weiss, Wesley Wilcox, Max Roseberry, Merton Porter, Fred Hindman, "Mickey" Ferrin, Gene Shellhorn, Joseph Green, Carroll Caris, John Holliday, Donald Creasap and Daniel Curtis.

TWO NEW MODEL CARS ON DISPLAY

Pontiac and Cadillac Shown at McDaniel Motor Co.

New 1946 models of Cadillac and Pontiac automobiles are on display in the show room of the McDaniel Motor Co. at 349 West Center street.

The Cadillac is a four-door touring sedan with a two-tone color design. The Pontiac is a gunmetal gray, eight cylinder two door touring sedan-coupe, a new model being introduced by Pontiac into the low price field.

Pontiac production will be concentrated on the sedan-coupe model. Pontiac expects to produce 500,000 cars of all designs during the first production year safely and that's all."

As many functional improvements have been built into the 1946 model Pontiac as in any model year, the builders of Pontiac report. Emphasis will be on "road-hugging appearance and plane-like contura."

Cadillac Motor Car Division expects to produce 85,000 cars during its first year of full production, the company reports. This is approximately 50 per cent more than were manufactured during the last post-war year.

The new model embodies many improvements, more than ever offered before in a new model. Emphasis will be on "new silhouette and streamlined massiveness." Many of the mechanical improvements are the result of knowledge gained through manufacturing for battlefield conditions.

COMMUNISTS REFUSE TO WOO DE GAULLE

By The Associated Press

PARIS, Nov. 17—The Communist party refused today to join in a three-party appeal to Gen. DeGaulle to reconsider his resignation as interim president of France.

The deadlock over allotment of principal cabinet posts appeared no nearer solution after a meeting this morning of a 30-member committee representing the three major parties in the constituent assembly.

Delegates of the Christian Democratic Popular Republican Movement (MRP) restated the party's determination to accept only de Gaulle as president.

Socialists suggested the committee ask de Gaulle to reconsider, but the Communists rejected the appeal.

De Gaulle was reported refusing to compromise with Communist demands for one of the three key cabinet portfolios—war, interior or foreign affairs.

An intimate of the interim president said his trump card in the battle was the fact he does not "especially want the job" of being president of the interim government.

EX-O. S. U. OFFICER NAMED

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 17—Col. L. E. Seeman, a 39-year-old West Pointer, formerly assistant professor of military science at Ohio State university, has been named military commander at the Los Alamos atomic bomb installation.

ATOMIC CONTROL IN 2 MONTHS FORECAST

By The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 17—The United States government believes the proposed United Nations commission for the control of atomic energy—particularly the atomic bomb—can be functioning in two months.

Secretary of State Byrnes held out that possibility in a speech here last night.

The first administration pronouncement on atomic energy since the President and the prime ministers of Britain and Canada issued their declaration Thursday, Byrnes said the period of three-nation secrecy on industrial know-how "need not be unnecessarily prolonged."

Referring to the proposed establishment of the commission, the secretary said, "This can be done within sixty days."

Philathea Class Meets with Miss Maxine Rowe

The Philathea class of the Fite Memorial Baptist church met Thursday night with Miss Maxine Rowe of Bennett street. Devotions were conducted by the teacher, Mrs. Glenn Riddle. During the meeting, election of officers was held as follows: Miss Maxine Rowe, president; Mrs. Robert Riddle, vice president; Mrs. James Erick, secretary, and Miss Jean Haberman, treasurer. A discussion was held of the Christmas meeting to be held Dec. 20 with Mrs. Robert Riddle on Bennett street. A Bible quiz followed with Mrs. Glenn Riddle in charge. The hostess was assisted by her mother, Mrs. H. Rowe.

Wainwright Sees Jap Surrender, Returns To U.S. and High Honors

In the final instalment of Gen. Wainwright's "This Is My Story," the gallant Hero of Bataan and Corregidor sees his old commander, Gen. MacArthur, officiates at two surrender ceremonies and comes back to his beloved homeland

Installment No. 42

I WENT to my room in Yokohama's Grand Hotel and washed up for my reunion with Gen. MacArthur, who was waiting for me in the dining room. It was Aug 31, 1945 I had not seen him since March 10, 1942, when he said goodbye to me on Corregidor.

Then I walked down to the dining room. And there he was looking fine and fit and every inch the leader he is.

MacArthur got up when he saw me coming toward him on the cane he had left me years before. He reached his arms out, took hold of me, cocked his head and looked me over.

Found Words Difficult

Each of us found it a little hard to speak.

Well,' Douglas said at last, "I'm glad to see you."

And all I could think to say was, "I'm glad to see YOU."

We sat down and ate, served by bowing Jap waiters. I sketched briefly the kind of lives we lived as captives, and he told me of the difficulties of getting to where we sat that night of Aug 31, 1945.

When it was over I went back to the lobby, where a number of war correspondents were waiting for me, and told them how grateful I was to be on hand for Japan's surrender.

Finds Complete Happiness

I've been waiting for this great day for more than three years, I couldn't be happier," I told them.

I heard from my wife again that night and wired her back through the courtesy of the National Broadcasting Co telling her my schedule and asking her to meet me in Washington.

I had another news conference and broadcast the next day, and a good visit and dinner with Lt Gen Bob Eichelberger, who commanded the first troops to land in Japan Newsreels were taken of me in my room that night and this kind of attention made me conscious of how much the years of starvation had turned me into a plucked chicken

Outstanding Day in History

Sunday, Sept 2, 1945 (Tokyo Time), was one of the great days of history, and I am eternally grateful to MacArthur for seeing to it that I was a party to the drama

Our party stepped aboard a Jap destroyer at a Yokohama dock at 8 a m and were taken out in the bay to the Missouri, the most startling weapon of war I have ever seen I simply could not believe that anything could be so huge, so studded with guns. Its guns looked like the bristles of a gigantic hedgehog.

I was struck mute by the scene until the destroyer edged alongside the huge battleship and I heard a familiar voice roar out from above

"Hello, Skinny!"

Meeting With Old Friend

I looked up, and peering down at me was my old friend and former classmate at the War College in Washington, Admiral Bill Halsey I had not seen him since he was a commander and I a lieutenant colonel in the early 1930s I got up to a point where I could touch the fingers he reached down to me, and it was a thrill to be back with a man who had done so much for his country

MacArthur went directly into a private cabin. I stood out on the deck beneath one of the huge forward turrets, and never saw as many generals and admirals in one spot in my life.

When the glum little Jap delegation had taken its place to fill the square, led by Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu, MacArthur made his entrance with Admiral Nimitz. It was an unforgettable moment.

An Immortal Speech

As MacArthur came through the American lineup he motioned to Gen Percival and me to follow him, and to stand behind him as he stepped to the microphone He then gave the short historic talk which schoolboys will know a thousand years from now, and told the Japs to come up and sign. Then he sat down at the table to sign as Supreme Allied Commander He took five fountain pens out of his pocket and placed them on the table.

Then he began to write his name When halfway through it he stopped, turned to me and asked me to step forward. He gave me the pen a wholly unexpected and very great gift He picked up another pen, wrote a bit more, and gave that to Gen. Percival The next three pens he set aside, to be given to various organizations in the United States Then he took a small red fountain pen out of his pocket—it was Mrs MacArthur's pen—and finished signing the document

They Dine With Halsey

When the signing was attended to and the Japs had been shown back to their special boat for the return to the mainland, a stunning flight of American war planes thundered overhead. The senior officers followed MacArthur to Halsey's quarters on the gigantic battlewagon and tough old Bill served us coffee and doughnuts

On the trip back to the mainland from the Missouri, on the same destroyer which brought us to the historic scene of capitulation, I spent some time on the bridge with the skipper I asked him if the destroyer Wainwright —named for my grandfather and my uncle—had survived the war and it was pleasing to hear that it had

The USS Wainwright was named for Jonathan M Wainwright, my grandfather, a member of the first class to graduate from the Naval Academy in the 1840s He was killed on Jan 1, 1863, while commanding the USS Harriet Lane at Galveston Harbor My uncle, Jonathan M Wainwright Jr, was killed in 1871 off the west coast of Mexico near Mazatlan in an engagement with a pirate vessel He was then an ensign aboard the USS Mohican.

Notable Family Record

But by 1871, my father, Robert P P Wainwright, had entered West Point My own Army service has extended beyond 100 consecutive years the services of a Wainwright to the United States, and it was with this thought, and thoughts of my son, Jonathan M Wainwright V, a commander in the Merchant Marine that I went below decks of the destroyer to the cabin set aside for MacArthur's use

I had learned that my son was in San Francisco but ready to sail on an extended trip through the Orient I missed him very badly and told MacArthur

I don't doubt it, Jonathan," he said "Wouldn't you like to have him go East with you to be present in Washington and New York for your celebrations there?

"I certainly would," I said

He called an officer to his side and sketched the text of a radio to be sent to the commander of the U. S. Merchant Marine recommending that my son be given a sufficient leave

Offered Army Command

In the remaining minutes before the destroyer docked at Yokohama, MacArthur and I renewed the broken threads of our long separation He offered me a command in the Army of Occupation, if I cared to return to Japan and reviewed the plans which had been made for me to fly back to the Philippines to be present at the surrender the next day of Yamashita at Baguio.

We said boodbye at the pier, and I was taken in tow by Brig Gen LeGrande A. Diller, in charge of my trip to Baguio. By noon I was at the Yokohama airdrome again, along with Gen. Percival, Beebe, Pugh, Dooley, Carroll, Gen. Valdes, chief of staff of the Philippine Army; Lt. Gen. Styer, Western Pacific area commander; Col. Ted Duglin, public relations officer of our forces in the Western Pacific, and Howard Pyle, of NBC.

(A) Taihoku, where on Aug 14, 1942, Wainwright was transferred to escape hold of a ship which delivered him to Rikuzentake where he was held from Aug 15, 1942 to April 2 1943 (C) Formosa, where Gen Wainwright spent April 2 to June 23, 1943 By train and boat Gen Wainwright was next shuttled to Mukden (D) where he was a prisoner from June 24 1943 to Oct 5 1944 The Japs decided to move him to Manchuria and he was taken by rail to Moji (E) from which he was flown to Japan

A BITTER JOURNEY. Traced here are the movements of Gen. Jonathan M Wainwright from the time he was officially declared to be a prisoner of war and imprisoned at Tarlac in the Philippines until he was flown back to Manila after his liberation from the Japs in Manchuria after 39 months in captivity. In "This Is My Story," Gen. Wainwright has told for the first time of the travails of those months, revealing the inhuman treatment meted out by the Japs to general and GI alike Gen. Wainwright emerged from his long captivity broken in health, but undaunted in spirit. In all, Gen. Wainwright was held in six different Japanese prison camps and his journeying as a captive took him from the Philippines to Formosa, to Japan, to Korea, and finally to bleak Manchuria

The plan for the C-54 was to fly back to Okinawa, gas up and fly on to Manila But a typhoon was blowing around Okinawa Instead, we flew to Iwo Jima, reaching that tiny spot just after dark, which filled me with a new admiration for Capt. Perkins and his C-54 crew

Hears Story of Iwo Jima

I had heard only dimly of Iwo Jima because of the blackout on news in prison camps, and because of the hectic rush of the past few days. But while I chewed on a sandwich and drank coffee, waiting for the C-54 to be refueled, a Marine officer told me the story of the incredible toughness of the little island, the heavy casualties suffered by the two Marine divisions which secured it, and its vital role in the aerial bombardment of Japan. I was finally catching up with the war.

We flew in over Manila at 1:45 a. m. and I was impressed by the scarcity of lights in what had once been a brilliant aerial approach to the city by night We drove back to the Admiral apartments, slept a short time and got up at 4 a m.

The weather to the north was so bad that there was no hope of even a small plane landing at Baguio. As an alternate, we got in a C-47 at Nielson airport and flew northwest over the land so emotionally familiar to me The pilot dropped low over the Naguilian field and threw out a note, asking that cars meet us at our alternate field at Laguna, 20 miles away.

Finds Old Residence Gone

The cars were waiting. We drove up to Baguio over the winding Naguilian Road, passing through the land where some of the first of those long-distant retreats began. Baguio had been a modern town with broad, well-kept streets and good buildings. But now the place was broken as if by some giant hammer, and strangely silent. Where a house of mine had stood, when I commanded the old Philippine division, was now a hole in the ground.

The surrender ceremony took place in the High Commissioner's residence, only slightly damaged by shelling but stripped of much of the fine furniture and all of the irreplaceable library which Francis Sayre had to leave behind him when he escaped from the Philippines by submarine.

Maj Gen Edmund H. Leavey, chief of staff for Lieut. Gen Styer, took the surrender Places had been arranged for Gen Styer and me at the Allied center of the table When we came in the Japs had been standing at their places for 10 tense minutes—Gen Yamashita and an admiral, each accompanied by an aide, and two interpreters After we were seated, they took their places on the folding chairs and stools opposite us

Yamashita, the so-called "Tiger of Malaya," was a man as large as my old opponent Homma and a little fleshier. He had been hiding out in the mountains to the west of Cagayan Valley and had been brought in the day before by a detachment of American troops His beribboned uniform was dirty and unpressed Gen Percival stared impassively at him, masking whatever emotion he felt over witnessing the unconditional surrender of the man who had so aggressively forced the same thing on Percival at Singapore in February, 1942.

Gen. Leavey conducted the brief ceremony. The Japs signed and then Gen. Leavey affixed his signature for the United States, handing one of his two signing pens to me He then announced that the Japs, having unconditionally surrendered, would be removed under guard as prisoners of war.

Immediately a large and capable-looking MP major came in with three or four muscular enlisted men. He walked up to Yamashita, punched an extended index finger into the Jap general's shoulder and motioned him out of the room like an umpire thumbing a player out of a ball game He was to be taken to Bilibid prison to await trial as a war criminal

Undeserved Courtesy

Yamashita suddenly wept as he walked away I got up from the table and strolled out of the room with Gen Styer.

"General," I asked him, "this might seem a little strange, coming from me, but I hope Yamashita is shown the courtesy due his rank, in the matter of personal accommodations, housing and food"

"He'll be given everything he's entitled to under the Geneva Convention," Gen. Styer assured me "We don't want to be guilty of treating anyone as the Japs treated you and your men"

I flew back to Manila that afternoon and through the evening I was called on by a number of old friends I had not seen in years

That same day I saw what was to me one of the most astonishing sights of my two score of years in the Army. Into my line of vision at the airfield walked a very pretty young lady

A Pleasing "Discovery"

"Well, I'll be damned," I must have muttered, for an officer next to me asked me what the matter was. I walked over to he.. She had on what was obviously the feminine version of an Army uniform. She even saluted me

"I beg your pardon," I said, "but . . . but what are you?"

She seemed a little startled.

"Why, I'm a Wac, sir."

"A what?"

"A Wac," she insisted.

I thanked her and came back to the officer..

"What the devil is a wac?" I asked him.

I was still catching up with the war.

The next day Sept 4 I reunited with Mrs. MacArthur at the general's residence in the Santa Mesa region of Manila along with Beebe, Pugh and Dooley

Farewell to Philippines

Many warm friends were at Nichols Field the next morning to see us off Capt Perkins lifted the big C-54 into the air at 8 o'clock and headed at sight east over Laguna de Bay As we drew off from the eastern shore of Luzon I felt a sudden sadness for though the Philippines had been the scene of my own and my country's most harrowing experience, I am very attached to the islands I felt that I would never see them again

We flew through perfect weather to Guam, whose development since I first saw it in 1908 and last saw it in 1940 was hard to believe. Lieut Gen Barney Giles, of the Twentieth Air Force, took us in hand that evening and showed us our first B-29

We left Guam in the morning and flew to Kwajalein where the Navy treated us handsomely, and then flew on all that night and until noon the next day to Honolulu, where an old comrade Lieut Gen Robert C Richardson was waiting for me at Hickam Field

Gets His Eight Stars

He had a luncheon ready and some great news While we were eating he took a radio message from his pocket from the adjutant general of the Army, and told me I had been promoted to the grade of full general With a big smile he produced eight silver stars from his pocket and pinned them on my shoulders The promotion was wholly unexpected, a very wonderful thing for President Truman to do, when one considers that I spent by far the greater part of the war in prison camps

We were Gen Richardson's guests in Hawaii until Friday night, Sept 7, when we took off for San Francisco It was cloudy as we approached the city But at 11 a m Sept 8 the clouds opened and there below us was the Golden Gate Bridge and the green mountains to the north of the Bay . . . home, and there never was a finer world

Meets Son and Sister

A large delegation met us at Hamilton Field the mayor, several generals—and my sister, Mrs Frederick Mears, of Seattle, and my boy, whom I had missed so very much With my boy and my sister in the car with me we whisked through the Presidio and into the city to the St Francis hotel, where a heart-warming crowd had gathered I talked to my wife by phone in Skaneateles, N Y, grateful to hear her voice again after more than four years

I spent Sunday morning, Sept 9, on my son's fine new ship, and then met the mayor and rode with him in the great parade which jointly celebrated the anniversary of California's admission to the Union and my own return It was a tremendous occasion, an indelible thrill.

Gen. Marshall had instructed me to arrive in Washington at exactly 12 30 p. m., Eastern War Time, the following day We took off from Hamilton Field in our same C-54 at 6 p m. Sunday and flew over land I have always loved—the Sierra Nevada mountains Late that night we landed at Omaha for gas

Arrival at Washington

We were ahead of schedule shortly after dawn, so Perkins flew us over the beautiful Tennessee Valley and the Big Smokies, gave us a look at the big Marine base at Quantico, Va, and put the C-54 down on the dot at 12 30 at the National Airport in Washington.

As I stepped from the plane a Guard of Honor presented arms and the band played the appropriate flourishes and ruffles and then the General's March. Standing at attention, as was everyone else, I kept my eyes on my wife, who stood there at Gen Marshall's side Gen Marshall let my wife come to me first

It was a busy day Mrs Wainwright and I were taken first to the Pentagon Building to meet that fine old gentleman and statesman, Col Stimson, in his office in the fantastic building the existence of which I had learned only a week before.

On a reception committee at the Pentagon were 30 or 40 officers and men of my former command in the Philippines, among them Col Howard, the Marine officer in command of Corregidor's beach defenses Brig Gen Romulo of the Philippine Army and a number of other Filipino officers and men, and Brig Gen. Mason Lough, who had suffered an almost killing blow over the head with a baseball bat during the Bataan Death March.

Sees Welcome Signs

We were driven across the bridge into Washington and on nearly every lamppost was a picture of myself in my own helmet, and the warning legend, "Welcome Skinny."

More than 10,000 persons had gathered on the Monument Grounds, and when I took my place on the flag-draped viewing stand they gave me a welcome that, I guess, lasted about 20 minutes. I was finally able to make myself heard and said, "I still find it hard to believe that I am really here, back among my own people

We lived in a blacked-out world during our prison days. One of the less and the greatest, of the sacrifices practiced by the Japs was to keep us from free exchange of mail with home We seldom knew what had happened to our loved ones.

From the poverty of our existence out there, we have returned to find America strong and great Even before we first set foot on the American Continent at San Francisco last Saturday we knew how this country had raised from our defeat at Corregidor

Must Keep Watch

The tables are now completely turned No humane person could desire that the Japs be forced to endure what many of our men went through Yet I know that Americans will insist that the full meaning of Japan's surrender be brought home to every subject of the Emperor. Those truculent men must be forced to realize the folly of their ambitions Until the Japanese people display sincerely a desire for peaceful ways, we must not abandon our watch

That moment of surrender in Tokyo Bay was bought with the blood of more than a million Americans who died or were wounded in the struggle Billions of dollars and countless hours of work by Americans at home had been required to bring that little party of beaten Japs to the Missouri's deck All because for a while we were careless of the nation's safety We let down our guard

"Remember Bataan! Remember Corregidor!"

The steps of the Capitol were filled with cheering men, women and children when we arrived there from the Monument Grounds to address the house of congress Speaker Sam Rayburn and members of the house military affairs committee met me and escorted me to the assembled house, where I spoke briefly.

President of the Senate Kenneth McKellar and members of the senate military committee took me into the senate chamber, where again I thanked the representatives of the American people for making possible this moving occasion Following my short address I was introduced to each senator

But the great day was not done My wife and I and our group were driven through streets lined with cheering and waving citizens to the White House

The President's military and naval aid took us to Mr. Truman's office, and it was a great thrill and privilege to see the Chief Executive again. We first met at Fort Riley, Kan., in the early 1930's and again in Kansas City shortly after his election to the United States senate I sat down next to him in his White House office and we talked of those previous meetings for a time and of many other things dear to both of us

Then Mr. Truman got up and rather casually said, "Come on, general, let's take a walk in the garden Some photographers out there want to get a picture of us together"

We walked out to the beautiful rose garden of the White House, while the cameras clicked, and then I saw the President wave me to a battery of microphones. I was momentarily afraid I was going to have to make another speech

But Mr Truman did the talking To my utter surprise he drew a paper from his pocket and began to read aloud

General Jonathan M. Wainwright, commanding United States Army forces in the Philippines from March 12 to May 7, 1942, distinguished himself by intrepid and determined leadership against greatly superior enemy forces. At the repeated risk of life above and beyond the call of duty in his position . . ."

I suddenly realized when I heard heard these magic words that this was the citation for the Congressional Medal of Honor, the ultimate goal of every American soldier

". . . he frequented the firing line of his troops where his presence provided the example and incentive that helped make the gallant efforts of these men possible

The final stand on beleaguered Corregidor, for which he was in an important measure personally responsible, commanded the admiration of the nation's Allies. It reflected the high morale of American arms in the face of overwhelming odds His courage and resolution were a vitally needed inspiration to the then sorely pressed freedom-loving peoples of the world"

Medal Presented

Mr Truman looked up from his script and an aid handed him the Medal of Honor

"And so it gives me more pleasure than almost anything I've ever done to present General Wainwright with the Congressional Medal of Honor—the highest honor this country can bestow on a man," Mr Truman finished.

Acclaimed by 4 Million

In the busy months that followed, before and after Gen Marshall arranged for me to go to Ashford General hospital at White Sulphur Springs, W Va., for a rest, I went through the most amazing receptions—especially one in New York, where 4,000,000 cheering Americans lined the parade route

But nothing can supplant in my mind that afternoon in the garden of the White House, where every dream of glory any man could have was realized.
